I. INTRODUCTION

1. The third Inter-Committee Meeting of the human rights treaty bodies and the sixteenth meeting of chairpersons of the human rights treaty bodies, held in Geneva from 21 to 22 and 23 to 25 June 2004 respectively, considered, inter alia, reservations to international human rights instruments.
2. The Inter-Committee Meeting agreed that it was appropriate for treaty bodies to request the withdrawal of reservations to the treaties they monitored. It also discussed the question of whether the treaty bodies could decide on the admissibility of reservations made by States, and agreed that although not all treaty bodies were confronted with this issue, it would be useful to adopt a common approach. The meetings proposed that the Secretariat prepare a report, including a table showing all reservations made to the core human rights treaties and the nature of the provisions covered, with a view to establishing a working group, consisting of a representative of each committee, to consider this report and report to the next inter-committee meeting (A/59/254, para. 18 and annex, point of agreement XVI). The present report has been prepared in response to that request.
3. The present report describes the provisions in the human rights treaties relating to reservations, as well as those in the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties of 1969. It surveys the approaches of the treaty bodies to reservations and the response of other United Nations bodies to the issue. Annex 1 contains a survey of each committee's response to reservations, including as expressed in concluding observations/comments upon examination of reports of States parties. Annex 2 contains a table of reservations, declarations (whether interpretative or otherwise) and understandings entered to the seven core human rights treaties and their optional protocols. The tables include objections by States parties to reservations, declarations or interpretations entered as well as withdrawals (whether total or partial) of reservations. Actions variously characterized as "reservations," "declarations" or "understandings" have been classified as "reservations" in the table where they have been identified by the State itself as constituting a reservation, or described by the United Nations Office of Legal Affairs, which carries out the Secretary-General's functions as depositary for the human rights treaties concerned, as a reservation, or where it is clear that the intent of the action is to limit the binding obligations assumed by the State party.
4. The current approach to reservations to treaties is based on the treaty provisions, the provisions of the Vienna Convention, which is widely regarded as representing generally binding customary law, the evolving practice of treaty bodies, as well as the evolving policy of the Office of Legal Affairs. It is also informed by the practice of the regional human rights courts, in particular the European Court of Human Rights, and the work of the International Law Commission (ILC), in particular, the work of its Special Rapporteur on reservations to treaties, Mr. Alain Pellet, who will be presenting his tenth report on the topic at the fifty-seventh session of ILC in 2005. This approach has also been affected by the work of the Sub-Commission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights.

II. THE PROVISIONS OF THE HUMAN RIGHTS TREATIES

5. The provisions of the human rights treaties address reservations in varying terms:

(a) The Optional Protocols to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, in articles 17 and 30 respectively, entirely prohibit reservations;

(b) The Second Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights prohibits reservations except those within the scope of article 2, paragraph 1, which provides for “a reservation made at the time of ratification or accession that provides for the application of the death penalty in time of war pursuant to a conviction for a most serious crime of a military nature committed during wartime.” Article 2, in paragraphs 2 and 3, also requires that a State Party making such a reservation communicate the relevant provisions of its national legislation applicable during wartime to the Secretary-General and notify him of the beginning or ending of a state of war applicable to its territory;

(c) Article 28 of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, article 51 of the Convention in the Rights of the Child and article 91 of the International Convention for the Protection of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families provide that a reservation incompatible with the object and purpose of the respective Convention shall not be permitted. The Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (art. 29) and the Convention on Migrant Workers (art. 91) also provide that States parties may enter reservations to the procedure of referring disputes to the International Court of Justice (ICJ) foreseen in the Convention;

(d) The International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination is the only treaty that elaborates a regime with respect to reservations. Article 20 provides that:

“1. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall receive and circulate to all States which are or may become Parties to this Convention reservations made by States at the time of ratification or accession. Any State which objects to the reservation shall, within a period of ninety days from the date of the said communication, notify the Secretary-General that it does not accept it.

“2. A reservation incompatible with the object and purpose of this Convention shall not be permitted, nor shall a reservation the effect of which would inhibit the operation of any of the bodies established by this Convention be allowed. A reservation shall be considered incompatible or inhibitive if at least two thirds of the States Parties to this Convention object to it.”

(e) The Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment is silent on reservations, but provides in article 28 that any State may, at the time of signature, ratification or accession to the Convention declare that it does not recognize the competence of the Committee provided for in article 20 (the inquiry procedure). As in the case of the Convention on Women and the Convention on

Migrant Workers, article 30, paragraph 2, provides that a State may enter a reservation to the procedure of referring disputes to ICJ foreseen in the Convention;

(f) The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and its first Optional Protocol, and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights are silent as to reservations.

III. THE VIENNA CONVENTION ON THE LAW OF TREATIES

6. Article 2, paragraph 1(d), of the Vienna Convention defines reservations as a “unilateral statement, however phrased or named, made by a State, when signing, ratifying, accepting, approving or acceding to a treaty whereby, it purports to exclude or modify the legal effect of certain provisions of the treaty in their application to that State.” It is generally understood that the Vienna Convention requires a reservation to be submitted by a State before the point it becomes bound by a treaty, be it by ratification, accession or otherwise. Withdrawal, whether in whole or in part, may take place at any time thereafter with respect to any or all of the reservations formulated. Articles 19 to 21 of the Vienna Convention establish a regime governing reservations to multilateral treaties whereby a reservation may not be prohibited by the treaty or incompatible with the object and purpose of the treaty. Other States parties may object to a reservation, which precludes the reservation from being effective between those States to the extent of the objection unless otherwise provided. Accordingly, the regime leaves decisions on the validity of reservations to States.

7. A number of human rights treaty bodies have questioned whether the regime established by the Vienna Convention is sufficiently capable of addressing reservations to international human rights treaties, particularly because the number of objections to reservations to these treaties is low. Some treaty bodies, in particular the Human Rights Committee (HRC), have assumed a role in the determination of the permissibility of reservations in the context of individual communications where they may be required to determine the particular scope of an obligation assumed by States parties before an assessment of compliance with the particular obligations can be made. Treaty bodies have also discussed the permissibility of reservations in the context of the examination of periodic reports, and generally encourage withdrawal, or at least consideration of withdrawal, even of permissible reservations on the policy basis that reservations diminish the scope of protection afforded by treaties and should thus be construed narrowly and removed if at all possible.

IV. THE APPROACH OF THE TREATY BODIES

A. The Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women

8. Most treaty bodies have adopted a formal approach to reservations. At its third session, CEDAW was provided with a legal opinion prepared by the Treaty Section of the Office of Legal Affairs on reservations made to certain articles of the Convention that were incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention.¹ The opinion indicated that in the absence of a specific regime such as ICERD's, "a question of interpretation of the Convention is involved here," and suggested that formal dispute mechanisms (arbitration or ICJ referral) would become applicable in the event of dispute as to the permissibility of a reservation. The opinion also indicated that the depositary had no interpretative power but was bound to circulate reservations received, and concluded that the functions of CEDAW "do not appear to include a determination of the incompatibility of reservations, although reservations undoubtedly affect the application of the Convention and the Committee might have to comment thereon in its reports in this context."

9. In its General Recommendation No. 4, adopted at its sixth session in 1987, CEDAW expressed "concern in relation to the significant number of reservations that appeared to be incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention" and suggested "that all States parties concerned reconsider such reservations with a view to withdrawing them." In its General Recommendation No. 20, adopted at its eleventh session in 1992, the Committee recommended "that, in connection with preparations for the World Conference on Human Rights in 1993, States parties should:

"(a) Raise the question of the validity and the legal effect of reservations to the Convention in the context of reservations to other human rights treaties;

"(b) Reconsider such reservations with a view to strengthening the implementation of all human rights treaties;

"(c) Consider introducing a procedure on reservations to the Convention comparable with that of other human rights treaties."

10. In its General Recommendation No. 21 on equality in marriage and family relations, adopted at its thirteenth session in 1994, CEDAW expressed its alarm at the number of States parties that have entered reservations to the whole or part of article 16 of the Convention, especially when a reservation had also been entered to article 2. Consistent with articles 2, 3 and 24 of the Convention, the Committee required that all States parties gradually progress to a stage where each country would withdraw its reservations, especially those to articles 9, 15 and 16. The Committee also noted that in some States parties that had ratified or acceded to the Convention without reservations, certain laws, especially those dealing with the family, did not actually conform to the provisions of the Convention, and requested those States parties to examine the de facto situation and introduce necessary measures in their national legislations that still contained provisions discriminatory to women. In General Recommendation No. 23 on women in political and public life, adopted at its sixteenth session in 1997, the Committee stated that States parties should explain the reason for, and effect of, any reservations to articles 7 or 8 relating to the participation of women in public and political life, and indicate where the reservations reflect traditional, customary or stereotyped attitudes towards women's roles in society, as well as the steps being taken by the States parties to change those attitudes. It also called on States parties to keep the necessity for such reservations under close review and include a timetable for their removal in their reports.

11. At its nineteenth session in 1998, CEDAW adopted a statement on reservations to the Convention as its contribution to the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (A/53/38/Rev.1, Part Two, paras. 1 et seq.). It stated, inter alia, that articles 2 and 16 were considered by the Committee to be core provisions of the Convention.

Although some States parties had withdrawn their reservations to them, the Committee was concerned at the number and extent of reservations entered to those articles, and at their impact on women in the States parties. It also considered the impermissibility principle enshrined in article 28, paragraph 2, of the Convention, which states that reservations incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention should not be permitted. In particular, it referred to the many reservations to article 2, which, in its view, represented a serious problem for the implementation of the Convention and the Committee's ability to monitor compliance with it. It also noted that despite the recommendations made in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, to date few reservations to article 2 had been modified or withdrawn by any State party, and referred to its General Recommendations Nos. 20 and 21. As concerns the options open to States parties that have entered reservations, the statement referred to the opinion of the Special Rapporteur of the International Law Commission (ILC) on the law and practice relating to reservations. According to the Special Rapporteur, a State may maintain the reservation/s, withdraw the reservation/s, replace impermissible with permissible reservation/s, or renounce being a party to the treaty. It also referred to the usefulness of the inter-State dispute procedure to encourage States to withdraw and modify reservations. Finally, it referred to the Committee's important role in continuing to review reservations, and while acknowledging the Special Rapporteur's opinion that the permissibility of reservations was the primary responsibility of States, it wished to draw the attention of States parties to its grave concern at the number and extent of impermissible reservations. The reporting guidelines of CEDAW require States parties to explain any reservation or declaration to the Convention and any reason for its maintenance and, drawing attention to its statement on reservations, detail the precise effect of any reservation or declaration in terms of national law and policy. The reporting guidelines also request States parties that have entered general reservations that do not refer to a specific article or to articles 2 and/or 3 to report on the effect and the interpretation of those reservations and to provide information on any reservations or declarations that they may have formulated with regard to similar obligations in other human rights treaties.

B. The Committee on the Rights of the Child

12. At its first session, the Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC) requested that the Secretariat provide a note on reservations to the Convention². It was submitted to the Committee at its second session in 1992, and indicated that international law did not provide clear guidance as to what kind of reservations should be considered incompatible with the object and purpose of a human rights treaty, but that primary responsibility for the evaluation of their compatibility lay with other States parties, which could express this by formulating objections to reservations. It also referred to an aide-mémoire from the Secretary-General of 1976, in which he stated that as treaty depositary, he had no competence to pass judgement on the legal effect of reservations, and to the opinion provided to the third session of CEDAW in 1984. During the discussion of the issue of reservations at that session, the Committee identified as its primary consideration to maintain the spirit of understanding and consensus deriving from the Convention, and stressed that it did not wish to refer to the question of reservations and declarations as a dividing factor which would undermine this spirit. The Committee nevertheless recognized the importance of tackling the issue in its examination of reports, and undertook to request States to provide

“information on the way in which reservations and declarations they had entered were reflected and applied in their national legislations”.³

13. In its general comment No 5 (2003) on general measures of implementation for the Convention, CRC referred to article 51, paragraph 2, of the Convention, as well as to article 2 of the Vienna Convention, and expressed deep concern that some States had made reservations that plainly breached article 51 (2) by suggesting, for example, that respect for the Convention is limited by the State’s existing constitution or legislation, including in some cases religious law. It noted that in some cases, States parties had objected to such wide-ranging reservations made by other States parties and commended any action that would contribute to ensuring the fullest possible respect for the Convention in all States parties.

14. In its general guidelines regarding periodic reports, CRC asked States, in the spirit of the World Conference on Human Rights, which encouraged States to consider reviewing any reservation with a view to withdrawing it,⁴ to indicate whether the Government considered it necessary to maintain the reservations it had made, if any, or had the intention of withdrawing them.⁵ In its guidelines for initial reports under the Optional Protocols, the Committee requests for information on the intention of States parties to withdraw any existing reservations.

15. At its general day of discussion devoted to the commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the Convention, the Committee endorsed conclusions asserting that the Committee it “has a decisive role to play in the assessment of the validity and impact of reservations made by States parties, and will continue to systematically raise this issue with States parties.” The Committee would “continue to encourage the review of reservations by States parties, as well as their withdrawal with a view to achieving the highest level of implementation of the Convention”. It stated that it would consider adopting a general comment on the subject, and that it would “raise with States parties the compatibility of reservations with the ‘object and purpose of the Convention’, clarify the situations where a lack of compatibility exists and reservations may be invalid, and suggest specific steps to reverse such situations.” The Committee encouraged “the provision of technical assistance to assist States parties in their effort to review reservations with a view to their withdrawal.”⁶ The Committee has yet to elaborate a general comment on reservations, but in the consideration of States parties’ reports, it has been particularly critical of reservations that affect all or a high number of Convention provisions, appear to be motivated by unclear or general considerations such as customs or values of the State party, might lead to discrimination on religious grounds, and might impede implementation of fundamental principles such as non-discrimination, best interests of the child or family rights.

C. The Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

16. As early as 1976, CERD called for a legal memorandum, inter alia, on the question of the legal effect of a unanimous decision by the Committee that a reservation was incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention, when that reservation had already been accepted, and the effect of such a decision in the light of article 20, paragraph 2, of the Convention. The memorandum indicated that the Committee was not a representative organ of the States parties, which alone had general competence concerning implementation of the Convention. When States parties had accepted a reservation within the terms of article 20, a decision, even unanimous, of the Committee that such a reservation was unacceptable could not have any legal effect.⁷ At its seventeenth session in April 1978, the Committee held a general discussion on the legal effects of reservations.⁸ Members agreed that the Committee must take into account reservations made, having no authority to do otherwise. A decision (even unanimous) of unacceptability of a reservation could not have any legal effect. Declarations, on the other hand, had no legal effect at all on the obligations of the declaring State, as otherwise they would have to be considered as reservations.

17. In its preliminary opinion on the issue of reservations to treaties on human rights of 13 March 2003⁹, the Committee stated that during the reporting procedure, a “human rights treaty body may take a view on the compatibility of a reservation entered by such a State with the object and the purpose of the treaty” (para. 3), and may recommend that the State consider changing the reservation, withdrawing it or other, noting that “this would be much more profitable than opening a legal struggle with all the reservation States and insisting that some of their reservations have no legal effect, that is that, in spite of their will when ratifying the Convention, they are bound by its integral text.” (para. 4).

D. The Human Rights Committee

18. The approach of the Human Rights Committee to reservations has developed predominantly as a result of their impact in communications under the Optional Protocol to the Covenant. At its fifty-second session in 1994, the Committee adopted general comment No. 24 on issues relating to reservations made upon ratification or accession to the Covenant or the Optional Protocols thereto, or in relation to declarations under article 41 of the Covenant. In it, the Committee stressed that “it necessarily falls to the Committee to determine whether a specific reservation is compatible with the object and purpose of the Covenant”, a task it is particularly well placed to perform (para. 18). It further sets out a series of reference points for determining this question, including perspectives of non-derogability, fundamental underlying principles and customary international law.

19. General comment No. 24 attracted considerable attention from States, with critical formal responses being received from France,¹⁰ the United Kingdom and the United States of America.¹¹ The issue of reservations arose during the consideration of the report of the United States of America, and the Committee taking note of the concerns addressed by the delegation in writing to its Chairman about the general comment. In the context of the consideration of the report of the United Kingdom, the Committee expressed appreciation for the frank acknowledgement by the delegation of the legal issues raised in the general comment with which the Government disagreed and for its willingness to engage in a dialogue with regard to those issues.¹²

E. The Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights

20. At a closed meeting of CESCR during its eighth session in 1993, the Chairperson and several members made comments as to reservations. The Chairperson observed that reservations were not a major problem, being few in number and generally uncontroversial.¹³ At its nineteenth session, in 1998, during the discussion on the draft general comment on domestic implementation of the Covenant, the question arose as to whether States were foreclosed from making reservations on the grounds of a State's internal religious law by the principle that failure to comply with international could not be justified by domestic law. The Chairperson considered that blanket reservations would not be accepted on account of imprecision, but specific reservations would probably be acceptable.¹⁴ Neither the general comment adopted, nor any other formal statement or guidelines of the Committee, addresses the reservations question.

21. Like CESCR, CAT has not elaborated any formal position on reservations, but has expressed concerns in the context of the examination of State party reports, and its concluding observations.

V. RESERVATIONS IN THE CONTEXT OF INDIVIDUAL COMMUNICATIONS

22. Reservations are relevant in the context of individual communications, as they can seek to affect the jurisdiction of the committee to hear the complaint or limit the scope of the permissible merits analysis. To date, HRC is the only human rights treaty body of the four with competence to consider individual complaints that has pronounced upon the effect of reservations in this context,¹⁵ both in respect of procedural reservations formulated to the Optional Protocol to the Covenant, and substantive reservations entered to the Covenant itself. In general terms, the Committee's approach is to confine the effect of reservations narrowly, but not to question their fundamental permissibility.

23. At the stage of ascertaining its jurisdiction to consider a complaint, that is, at the stage of admissibility of a complaint, the Committee has frequently had to consider the effect of procedural reservations on a particular case. These procedural reservations may be divided into two types: first, reservations that mirror the existing law, as set out either in the Optional Protocol or the Committee's case law, and, second, reservations that extend beyond this scope. Typical examples of the former are reservations that seek to exclude the Committee's competence on the basis that (i) another international mechanism of investigation or settlement is considering the same matter (Croatia, France, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, Malta, Romania, Russian Federation, Slovenia, Sri Lanka, Sweden), or (ii) the events complained of predate the entry into force of the Optional Protocol for the country concerned (Chile, Croatia, El Salvador, France, Germany, Guatemala, Malta, Russian Federation, Slovenia, Spain, Sri Lanka), or (iii) exhaustion of available domestic remedies (Russian Federation). As these requirements are already found, however, in article 5, paragraph 2(a), of the Optional Protocol and in the Committee's case law, such reservations do not impose any additional restriction upon the Committee's competence. Exceptions or limitations developed by the Committee on the interpretation of these norms thus apply equally whether the provision is found in the text of the Optional Protocol, the Committee's case law or a mirroring reservation.¹⁶ While in certain of these cases there may be arguments that the reservation extends beyond what the legal situation would anyway be (for example, Germany's ratione temporis reservation and Russia's domestic remedies reservation), nothing has to date turned on any such distinctions. It follows that this class of "reservation" has been considered unobjectionable and thus routinely applied by the Committee.¹⁷

24. The second category of procedural reservations are those that restrict the Committee's competence beyond already existing limits, typically those restricting the Committee's competence to examine complaints that have already been examined by another international instance, whether in general or specifically named (in addition to ones in the process of parallel examination) (Austria, Croatia, Denmark, France, Germany, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Malta, Norway, Poland, Romania, Slovenia, Sri Lanka, Spain,¹⁸ Sweden, Uganda). In this case, ¹⁵ In the case of Hagan v. Australia (26/2002) before the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, the State party raised its reservation to article 4 of the Convention by way of defence to the claims, but the Committee, in its analysis of the merits, made no reference to this issue.

¹⁶ See Sarma v. Sri Lanka (950/2000).

¹⁷ See, for example, Paraga v. Croatia (727/1996).

the Committee has been anxious to narrow the potential scope of such a reservation, and has done so in three broad ways.¹⁹ Firstly, the other instance must be a judicial or quasi-judicial process, excluding processes such as the 1503 procedure of the Commission on Human Rights or complaints to special rapporteurs of that Commission. Secondly, the Committee has required the same facts raising the same claims to have been submitted by the same person to both instances before the reservations can take effect.²⁰ In particular, when the applicable provisions of the Covenant are broader than those of another instrument, the “same claim” will not have been shown.²¹ Thirdly, even if the “same matter” exists before both instances, the Committee has defined an “examination” of that matter by another instance to be a decision (however summary) on the merits of the case, so as to retain competence when the other instance rejected the case on technical or procedural grounds.²² While taking the restrictive approach described, however, the Committee respects the underlying purpose of a reservation and avoids formalistic interpretations that would deprive it of meaning. Thus, the Committee interpreted Austria’s reservation concerning complaints to the European Commission on Human Rights as covering complaints made to its successor body the European Court, despite counsel’s invitation to strictly construe the term.²³ As these reservations have extended restrictions based on permissible policy considerations already reflected in the Optional Protocol and the case law, the Committee has not gone beyond a restrictive interpretation to a more fundamental criticism of their permissibility.

25. A further example of procedural reservations to the Optional Protocol which seek to impose limits on the Committee’s jurisdiction beyond those found in the Optional Protocol or the case law are reservations seeking to preclude the Committee’s competence with respect to a certain substantive category of cases, for example by excluding the Committee’s competence with respect to death row prisoners. In Kennedy v. Trinidad and Tobago,²⁴ the Committee considered that such an exclusion constituted discrimination counter to basic principles of the Covenant and its Optional Protocols, and thus was impermissible as contrary to the object and purpose of the Optional Protocol. The reservation was thus severed and the communication declared admissible notwithstanding. This has been the only occasion, in a complaint, where a reservation has been considered void and of no effect.

²⁰ See, for example, Rogl v. Germany (808/1998).

²¹ See, for example, Karakurt v. Austria (965/2000).

²² See, for example, Weiss v. Austria (1086/2002).

²³ Wallman v. Austria (1002/2001).

²⁴ Case 845/1999.

26. On rare occasions, communications to the Committee have raised the effect of a reservation made to the Covenant. For example, in Cabal and Pasini v. Australia,²⁵ the authors claimed inter alia a violation of article 10, paragraph 2, to which Australia had entered a reservation stating: “In relation to paragraph 2 (a) the principle of segregation is an objective to be achieved progressively”. The Committee deferred to the reservation, rejecting an argument that it was incompatible with the object and purpose of the treaty. It also observed:

“the State party’s reservation in question is specific and transparent, and ... its scope is clear. It refers to the segregation of convicted and unconvicted persons and does not extend, as argued by the authors and not contested by the State party, to cover the separate treatment element of article 10, paragraph 2 (a) as it refers to these two categories of persons. The Committee recognizes that while 20 years have passed since the State party entered the reservation and that it intended to achieve its objective ‘progressively’, and although it would be desirable for all States parties to withdraw reservations expeditiously, there is no rule under the Covenant on the time frame for the withdrawal of reservations. In addition, the Committee notes the State party’s efforts to date to achieve this objective with the construction of the Melbourne Remand Centre in 1989, specifically for the purpose of housing remand prisoners, and its plan to construct two new prisons in Melbourne, including a remand prison, by end 2004. Consequently, although it may be considered unfortunate that the State party has not achieved its objective to segregate convicted and unconvicted persons in full compliance with article 10, paragraph 2 (a), the Committee cannot find that the reservation is incompatible with the object and purpose of the Covenant.”

27. Similarly, in a series of individual communications against France by members of the Breton linguistic minority invoking article 27, the Committee consistently rejected those claims on the basis that they were precluded by France’s declaration upon reservation to the effect that: “In the light of article 2 of the Constitution of the French Republic, the French Government declares that article 27 is not applicable so far as the Republic is concerned.”²⁶ The Committee reasoned, in the first case raising the point:

“In the present case, the statement entered by the French Government upon accession to the Covenant is clear: it seeks to exclude the application of article 27 to France and emphasizes this exclusion semantically with the words “is not applicable”. The statement’s intent is unequivocal and thus must be given preclusionary effect in spite of the terminology used.”

28. In two later cases, the Committee exhibited a more pragmatic approach. While respecting the exclusionary effect of a particular reservation, it nonetheless assessed the particular claim from another Covenant perspective and thus avoided a situation where the claim escaped merits scrutiny altogether. Thus, in Maleki v. Italy,²⁷ the State party invoked its reservation to article 14(3)(d) in defending a communication concerning trials in absentia. The Committee found a violation on the facts, indicating:

²⁵ Case 1020/2001.

²⁶ T.K. v. France (Case 220/1987), M.K. v. France (222/1987), S.G. v. France (347/1988), G.B. v. France (348/1989), R.L.M. v. France (Case 363/1989) and C.L.D. v. France (439/1990).

“9.2 The State party’s argument is that its declaration concerning article 14, paragraph 3 (d) is a reservation that precludes the Committee examining the author’s argument that his trial in absentia was not fair. However, that declaration deals only with article 14, paragraph 3 (d), and does not relate to the requirements of article 14, paragraph 1. The State party itself has argued that its legal provisions regarding trial in absentia are compatible with article 14, paragraph 1. Under this provision, basic requirements of a fair trial must be maintained, even when a trial in absentia, is not, ipso facto, a violation of a State party’s undertakings. These requirements include summoning the accused in a timely manner and informing him of the proceedings against him.”

29. In Hopu and Bessert v. France,²⁸ while adhering to its deference to the declaration made by France concerning article 27, the Committee analysed the same claim from the perspective of articles 17 and 23 and concluded that there were violations of those articles.

VI. OTHER UNITED NATIONS BODIES

(a) International Law Commission

30. At its forty-fifth session in 1993, ILC decided to include in its agenda a topic entitled “The law and practice relating to reservations to treaties”, and appointed a Special Rapporteur for this topic. This decision was taken, in particular, to respond to the debate between the “opposability school”, which argues that the only criterion for the validity of a reservation is that of the objections of other States, and the “permissibility school”, which considers that a reservation contrary to the object and purpose of the treaty is null and void in itself, irrespective of the reactions of the other contracting States.²⁹ In the Special Rapporteur’s view, there was no convincing basis for a specific regime for reservations to human rights treaties, and what was in fact questioned were the lacunae and ambiguities of the general regime of the Vienna Convention.³⁰ In the debate on the topic, some members underlined the specificity of human rights treaties, and considered that general comment No. 24 (1994) responded to the lacunae of the Vienna Convention.³¹ The Rapporteur indicated that treaty-monitoring bodies “could and should assess whether reservations were permissible when that was necessary for the exercise of their functions”.³² If the bodies were jurisdictional, the opinion of the treaty body would be binding on the concerned States, such as in the case of the European Court of Human Rights. As they were not, the opinion of the treaty body would not be binding, but States parties should consider the opinion in good faith. In any case, non-jurisdictional organs could not “draw any consequences from such an assessment in the absence of a decision by the State concerned”, i.e. its consent to be bound by the treaty. The Special Rapporteur criticized general comment No. 24, since the HRC had constituted itself as the “sole judge of the permissibility of reservations”. In his view, the system of States parties’ objections remained operative and more effective.³³

31. These debates formed the background to the preliminary conclusions on reservations to normative multilateral treaties including human rights treaties drawn by ILC,³⁴ which concluded that the Vienna regime was applicable to all treaties, but that the establishment of monitoring bodies by human rights bodies gave rise to new legal questions. If treaties were silent on this subject, monitoring bodies could comment upon and express recommendations on the admissibility of reservations. Monitoring bodies could also appreciate or determine the admissibility of reservations if expressly stated in the treaties, or if protocols were elaborated to existing treaties for this purpose. In any case, it was the reserving State that had responsibility for taking action. These conclusions were sent to treaty bodies for comments.

32. The Chairperson of HRC replied by a letter dated 9 April 1998, suggest that the Commission’s conclusion that the reserving State had the responsibility for taking action had to be modified in order to adapt to new regional and international practices.³⁵ In a second letter dated 5 November 1998, the Committee expressed its concern at the views expressed by the Commission in paragraph 12 of its preliminary conclusions,³⁶ adding that “States parties should respect conclusions reached by the independent monitoring body competent to monitor compliance with the instrument within the mandate it has been given.”³⁷

33. The Committee against Torture informed ILC that it had considered the Commission’s preliminary conclusions at its twenty-first session in November 1998, and that it shared the views expressed by the Human Rights Committee, which it considered to be consistent with the Vienna Convention.³⁸ In its statement on reservations to the Convention of July 1998,³⁹ CEDAW concluded that it had certain responsibilities on the issue and described its practice of constructive dialogue with States on reservations. It noted that the Special Rapporteur of ILC considered that control of the permissibility of reservations was the primary responsibility of the States parties, but expressed its grave concern at the number and extent of impermissible reservations. It noted that even when States objected to such reservations there appeared to be reluctance on the part of the States concerned to remove and modify them and thereby comply with general principles of international law.

34. The ninth meeting of chairpersons of human rights treaty bodies in 1998 expressed the view that the ILC draft conclusions were unduly restrictive, and did not accord sufficient attention to the fact that human rights treaties were specific. The Chairpersons expressed their firm support for the approach reflected in general comment No. 24 of the Human Rights Committee and they urged that the conclusions proposed by ILC should be adjusted accordingly to reflect that approach.⁴⁰

35. A report submitted to CEDAW in 2001 analysed the approach of human rights treaty bodies to reservations to human rights treaties.⁴¹ Commenting on this report, the Special Rapporteur of ILC noted that the impression could be formed from it that “the human rights treaty bodies reviewed are more anxious to engage in a dialogue with the States authors of the reservations to encourage them to withdraw the reservations when these appear to be abusive rather than to rule on their impermissibility.”⁴² In his seventh report, he had recorded that “few of them have responded; those that have, have reacted in a somewhat negative fashion, giving reasons that are not well founded.”⁴³ On 13 August 2002, the ILC addressed a letter to all treaty bodies as well as to the Sub-Commission (with which to date it had had no contact), proposing to hold joint meetings to discuss this issue.

36. On 13 May 2003, ILC met with CESCR and CAT. The main issue discussed at that meeting was whether it was for the treaty bodies should determine whether a State party that had made an incompatible reservation remained bound by the Convention, or whether this was a matter for States parties. From the replies received from the treaty bodies, the Special Rapporteur of ILC welcomed the approaches adopted by CERD in its preliminary opinion of March 2003 and CEDAW in the above-mentioned report, but considered the approach of HR too dogmatic. The opinions of the members of both ILC and the Committees appeared to be divided.

37. In a meeting with ILC on 31 July 2003, HRC confirmed that the Committee continued to endorse general comment No. 24, and several members of the Committee stressed that there was growing support for the severability approach, but that there was no automatic conclusion of severability for inadmissible reservations but only a presumption. The Special Rapporteur of ILC indicated that the Committee should be able to decide on the applicability and validity of reservations, and that the “severability” argument could be applied in special circumstances, but only if the monitoring body concerned proceeded to a good faith evaluation of the true intent of the reserving State. Differences amongst the various language versions of general comment No. 24 were pointed out, and it was suggested that these (in particular where the French version was concerned) might have led to the impression that it was rigid in the context of severability.

38. In a meeting between CERD and ILC on 4 August 2004, the Special Rapporteur indicated that ILC intended to revise its preliminary conclusions, as they could lead to some practical difficulties in cases where the reserving State did not determine the appropriate action to be taken following a declaration of invalidity of its reservations, as no mechanism obliged the State to take action. He also suggested that the view expressed by ILC in its preliminary conclusions may have been too rigid, and that an intermediate approach between that of the Human Rights Committee and the preliminary conclusions needed to be achieved. In his view, bodies adopting binding decisions could have the competence to take a position on the severability of reservations from the State’s consent to be bound by the treaty. The relevant body should, however, conduct thorough research on the intention of the State party concerned, which in some cases would be impossible to identify. The Special Rapporteur expressed his satisfaction with the position of CERD contained in its preliminary opinion, which CERD indicated had been confirmed in a plenary discussion on 3 August 2004. CERD also indicated that as the regime of reservations elaborated in its article 20 was ineffective, it deemed itself able to take action and apply informally the rules of the Vienna regime. The approach of the Committee should continue to be pragmatic, aimed at promoting the most extensive and uniform application of the Convention through dialogue and persuasion. ILC members emphasized that it was difficult for CERD to take action against incompatible reservations when a specific provision of the Convention left it to States parties to decide. They also observed that ILC was currently reflecting upon a new procedure referred to as “dialogue réservataire”, through which bodies and States parties would enter in a dialogue on the withdrawal and validity of reservations. Attention was drawn to draft guideline 2.5.3 of ILC on the issue of periodic review of the usefulness of reservations, which provides as follows:

“States or international organizations which have made one or more reservations to a treaty should undertake a periodic review of such reservations and consider withdrawing those which no longer serve their purpose. In such a review, States and international organizations should devote special attention to the aim of preserving the integrity of multilateral treaties and, where relevant, give consideration to the usefulness of retaining the reservations, in particular in relation to developments in their internal law since the reservations were formulated.”

(b) Sub-Commission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights

39. In 1991, the Sub-Commission considered a proposal that the International Court of Justice be requested to provide an advisory opinion on the validity of reservations to CEDAW, in light of the numerous and sweeping nature of reservations to this Convention.⁴⁴ Proponents suggested that only the International Court could decide on the consequences of an impermissible reservation: whether the State party would remain bound without the effect of the reservation or not be bound at all. The Sub-Commission decided to defer the proposal.

40. In a letter dated 19 March 1997, the Chairperson of CERD proposed that the Sub-Commission address, inter alia, the issue of reservations to treaties. The Chairperson explained that “while reservations are regulated generally by the Convention of Vienna, this Convention does not concern itself specifically with problems associated with an international instrument having the specific objective of promoting human rights, to which cannot be applied the concept of reciprocity given that these treaties were conceived to apply without discrimination to all persons.”⁴⁵ In its decision 1998/113, the Sub-Commission requested Ms. Françoise Hampson to prepare a working paper on the question of reservations to human rights treaties. In her working paper,⁴⁶ Ms. Hampson stated that “reservations to human rights treaties pose quite particular difficulties, partly attributable to the fact that the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties did not contemplate the possibility of independent enforcement/monitoring bodies taking a view on the validity of reservations. That competence, however, necessarily flows from their functions.” She proposed that a detailed and substantive examination of the reservations themselves, across different human rights treaties, be undertaken. States should be asked whether they envisaged removing reservations where relevant, and “could also be asked what their choice would be” between remaining a party to the treaty without each reservation and denouncing it.⁴⁷ The Sub-Commission endorsed the conclusions of Ms. Hampson, and by its resolution 1999/27, appointed her Special Rapporteur with the task of preparing a comprehensive study on reservations to human rights treaties.

41. Following a request of the Commission on Human Rights for clarification on how the proposed study on reservations would complement work already under way on reservations to human rights treaties, in particular by ILC,⁴⁸ the Sub-Commission decided, by its resolution 2000/16, to appoint Ms. Hampson as Special Rapporteur with the task of preparing a comprehensive study on reservations to human rights treaties. This study would not duplicate the work of ILC, which concerned the legal regime applicable to reservations and interpretative declarations in general, since the proposed study involved the examination of the actual reservations and interpretative declarations made to human rights treaties in the light of the legal regime applicable to reservations and interpretative declarations. Following a request by the Commission on Human Rights that the Sub-Commission reconsider its decision in the light of the work under way by ILC,⁴⁹ the Sub-Commission, by its resolution 2001/17, entrusted Ms. Hampson with the task of preparing an expanded working paper on reservations to human rights treaties, which would not duplicate the work of ILC.

42. Ms. Hampson's expanded working paper contained a chart of the (then) six United Nations human rights treaties, which indicated "which States have made reservations or interpretative declarations, whether reservations were with regard to normative or procedural provisions, whether any other States objected and, if so, whether that was on the grounds that the reservation/interpretative declaration was incompatible with the objects and purposes of the treaty."⁵⁰ The Sub-Commission requested Ms. Hampson to submit another extended working paper,⁵¹ which was submitted in 2003.⁵² Concerning the individual complaints procedure, she stated that "a monitoring body cannot be expected to give effect to a reservation it has found to be incompatible with the objects and purposes of a treaty", and stressed that the result is the application of the treaty without the reservation ("severance"), as "it is, of course, open to the High Contracting Party to denounce the treaty or protocol". She concluded, in particular, that "where a human rights treaty body reaches the conclusion that a reservation is incompatible with the objects and purposes of the treaty, the reserving State may (i) withdraw the reservation or (ii) modify the reservation so as to make it compatible with the treaty or (iii) denounce the treaty." Human rights treaty bodies "should be encouraged to continue their current practice of entering a dialogue with reserving States, with a view to effecting such changes in the incompatible reservation as to make it compatible with the treaty."

43. In its decision 2003/114, the Sub-Commission requested Ms. Hampson to update and submit a final working paper, with a view to transmitting it to CERD, other treaty bodies and the ILC. In 2004, Ms. Hampson submitted the final working paper⁵³, in which she reached the conclusion that applying the normal rules of treaty law and the principle that a judicial or quasi-judicial body had the jurisdiction to determine whether or not it had jurisdiction, the human rights treaty bodies had the competence to determine whether or not a reservation was incompatible with the object and purpose of the treaty. The working paper also called for a global chart of all reservations and responses, to be kept up to date, and for a compilation of any observations made by a treaty body, in any context, with regard to reservations. These observations should be shared with all the other treaty bodies. She recommended suspension of further consideration of the issue pending the publication of the next report of the Special Rapporteur of ILC, and his conclusions on the validity of reservations and consequences of invalidity.

44. The ILC and the Sub-Commission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights met on 7 August 2003, with broad agreement being reached on the view that it is within the competence of a treaty body to determine the validity of reservations. There was divided opinion on the consequences of a conclusion by a human rights treaty body that a reservation was incompatible. Ms. Hampson's view was that it was up to the State to decide on the consequences of such a determination, but in the interim, the State would remain bound to the treaty without the benefit of the reservation. The Special Rapporteur of ILC indicated that in his opinion, such a result would go against the general rule of international law that States can only be bound to treaties through their consent. Some members of the Sub-Commission also pointed out that States could withdraw from a treaty if the monitoring body decided that a reservation was incompatible. The Sub-Commission as a whole did not have an agreed point of view on the issue.

VII. CONCLUSIONS

45. The survey of the approach of treaty bodies to reservations (annex 1) indicates reservations are a matter of significant concern, although the way this concern is expressed, as well as the remedial recommendations (if any) suggested, vary both within and among the treaty bodies. All treaty bodies are motivated by concern as to the existence and scope of reservations and seek, through their respective mechanisms, to restrict the scope of existing reservations and encourage the removal by States parties. However, there is little guidance from treaty bodies on the criteria by which a reservation should be determined to be impermissible as being in breach of a treaty's object and purpose. There is also little guidance on the consequences of a determination that a reservation is contrary to the treaty's object and purpose or on how treaty bodies should approach States parties whose reservations to the same issue across the treaties are inconsistent.

46. There appears to be scope in the area of reservations for treaty bodies to take a more harmonized approach, which might be guided by a joint general comment. Issues that treaty bodies might address in such a comment could include:

- (a) Should lists of issues consistently query the factual basis or need for the maintenance of reservations?
- (b) During the constructive dialogue, should the/a country rapporteur always raise the reservations issue in his or her comments on the State party report?
- (c) Where concluding comments or observations are concerned, should treaty bodies:
 - (i) Consistently welcome the absence of reservations as positive aspect;
 - (ii) Consistently welcome the withdrawal, whether total or partial, of a reservation;
 - (iii) Comment positively on expressions of willingness to review or on ongoing reviews of reservations;

- (iv) Consistently welcome the absence of reservations;
- (v) Identify the existence of a reservation as a factor impeding the implementation of the particular treaty;
- (vi) Include standard formulations of concern for maintenance of reservations, failure to review need for them, failure to withdraw them;
- (vii) Encourage progressive narrowing of scope through partial withdrawals of reservations, or call for complete withdrawal.

(d) In light of the occasional inconsistency of States parties in making reservations to certain provisions protected in more than one treaty, limit or ignore a reservation on the basis of the availability of better protection in other international conventions, or provide an opportunity to limit or even ignore the reservation made in a particular treaty?⁵⁴

(e) Adopt standard approaches to determining whether reservations are considered to be contrary to the object and purpose of the treaty, and adopt standard formulations in this context?

(f) Identify reservations as priority follow-up issues in follow-up procedures?

47. Treaty bodies might also consider adopting a common approach to the issue of reservations in their reports, and could consider including a section outlining the number of States with reservations to the treaty; the reservations entered or withdrawn over the reporting period (with the committee's view on these steps); the comments of the committee on reservations in the context of reporting, and, as appropriate, individual complaint process over the reporting period; as well as any other activities or steps taken by the committee concerned.

The Practice of the Human Rights Treaty Bodies with Respect to Reservations - Concluding Observations/Comments and Miscellaneous Issues

A. Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

Positive remarks

On four occasions, the Committee welcomed a State party's withdrawal of a reservation (Belarus, Bulgaria, Hungary, Poland).

On one occasion:

- the Committee described a withdrawal of a reservation as an “encouraging sign” (Bulgaria);
- in the context of welcoming adoption of other legislation, the Committee recommended that the State party continue making efforts to adopt appropriate legislation with a view to giving full effect to the provisions of, and withdrawing its reservation to, an article of the Convention (Australia);
- the Committee noted with satisfaction that a State party had in practice abandoned its reservations to the Convention and instituted a procedure for their formal withdrawal (Italy);
- the Committee welcomed information that the State party was considering withdrawing its reservations (Nepal);
- the Committee welcomed a State party's delegation's commitment to withdraw a reservation (Spain).

Neutral remarks

On three occasions, the Committee observed that in the absence of a relevant reservation certain standards had to be met by the State party on the substantive issue (Iceland, Norway, Sweden).

On one occasion:

- the Committee stated that it would be appreciated if the next report contained information as to whether it was considering withdrawal of a reservation (Barbados);
- the Committee noted the existence of a reservation (Papua New Guinea).

Critical remarks

On four occasions, the Committee recommended that the State party consider withdrawing its reservation (Belarus twice, Belgium, Papua New Guinea).

On one occasion the Committee:

- noted the formulation of reservations with concern and encouraged withdrawal thereof. (Fiji) (The Committee had earlier asked the same State party that “detailed information” be submitted on the “significance and consequences” of its reservations and declarations);
- noted the existence of a reservation but considered that the State party’s interpretation of the article in question was at odds with its obligations under that provision (Japan);
- recommended that the State party adopt appropriate legislation with a view to withdrawing its reservation to an article of the Convention (Australia);
- noted with concern, on account of vagueness and generality in particular, reservations entered and encouraged the State party to consider withdrawing all reservations (Bahamas);
- suggested that the State party consider withdrawing its reservation (Jamaica);
- hoped that the State party would be in a position to withdraw its reservation (Jamaica);
- requested the State party to consider the possibility of withdrawing a reservation (Barbados);
- suggested that the State party avail itself of the possibility under article 20(3) of the Convention to withdraw its reservations in order to ensure the full applicability of the relevant articles (Nepal);
- remained concerned, in view of two reservations by a State party, that full implementation of the relevant provisions might not be ensured, and thus recommended that the State party consider withdrawal in order to ensure the full applicability of the articles (Nepal);
- encouraged the State party to review a reservation with a view to formally withdrawing it, in light of concerns of compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention (Saudi Arabia);
- encouraged a State party to review its declarations and reservations with a view to withdrawal (United Kingdom);
- recommended review of a reservation (Spain);
- expressed the hope that a State party would withdraw a reservation (Spain);
- expressed the hope that a State party would undertake to withdraw its reservations (Viet Nam);

- invited the State party to consider if a reservation was still necessary or could be withdrawn (Switzerland);
- invited the State party to consider formally withdrawing its reservations (Yemen);
- urged the State party to reconsider a reservation (Switzerland);
- emphasized concern about the State party's declarations and reservations, and was particularly concerned about the implication of one reservation (United States of America);
- recommended that the State party seriously consider withdrawing its reservations (Yemen).

Comments on other treaties

On one occasion, the Committee expressed concern at the State party's reservations to another treaty and welcomed the introduction of draft legislation, which reflected the State party's intention to withdraw these reservations. The Committee encouraged the State party to give high priority to this process (Malawi).

Miscellaneous

In its Annual Reports, the Committee has recorded a number of matters concerning its view of reservations to the Convention. The Committee recorded that on 4 August 2004, it had held a joint meeting with the International Law Commission, at the latter's invitation, on the question of reservations to human rights treaties. The Chairperson of the Committee referred to a working paper assessing the recent practice of the Committee regarding reservations prepared by Committee member Sicilianos. He explained that article 20 of the Convention constituted a specific basis for the Committee as it provided criteria for admissibility and validity of reservations and stressed that a similar provision did not exist in other human rights treaties. While relying on this provision as a starting point, the Committee had adopted a flexible and pragmatic approach regarding reservations. The Committee had requested further information or formulated substantive recommendations on issues covered by reservations, while inviting States to consider the scope, or even the withdrawal of their reservations. In some cases, the Committee had had to adopt a critical position regarding the compatibility of reservations of a general character with the provisions, or even with the object and purpose of the Convention. (A/59/18 (2004), at paragraph 11).

In recent years, the Committee has included an agenda item on action taken by the General Assembly, including resolutions of that body concerning the Convention and the Committee's work. The Committee most recently reviewed action taken by the General Assembly at its 58th session. It had before it General Assembly resolution 58/160 of 22 December 2003 which inter alia: "(c) urged States parties to withdraw reservations contrary to the object and purpose of the Convention". (A/59/18 (2004), at paragraph 474). Previously, the Committee reviewed General Assembly action taken on the basis of slightly varying resolutions. Thus, General Assembly Resolution 57/194 of 18 December 2002 inter alia "(e) urged States parties to withdraw reservations that are contrary to the object and purpose of that Convention and to review their reservations on a regular basis with a view to withdrawing them". (A/58/18 (2003) at paragraph 585). Similarly, General Assembly Resolution 56/267 inter alia "(b) ... urged States to withdraw reservations contrary to the object and purpose of that Convention and to consider withdrawing other reservations". (A/57/18 (2002), at paragraph 493). General Assembly Resolution 55/81, for its part, inter alia "(b) urged all States that had not yet done so ... to review their reservations to the Convention with a view to withdrawing them, and to withdraw reservations contrary to the object and purpose of the Convention". (A/56/18 (2001), at paragraph 462).

In connection with the preparations for, and aftermath of, the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance (2001), the Committee made a number of pronouncements concerning reservations. In its General Recommendation XXVIII on the follow-up to the World Conference, the Committee recommended to States, in the context of measures to strengthen the implementation of the Convention, "(d) to consider withdrawing their reservations to the Convention" (A/57/18 (2002), Annex E). In Decision 5(55) in advance of the World Conference, the Committee inter alia decided to compile a list of States reserving to the Convention and the texts thereof (A/54/18 (1999)).

The Committee has also participated in the discussions of this issue by other bodies. Under an item entitled "Effective implementation of international instruments on human rights, including reporting obligations under international instruments on human rights", the Committee has recorded interaction with cross-Committee processes. In 1993, the Committee Chair introduced the report of the fourth meeting of persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies (A/47/628), which had been held in October 1992. Attention was drawn to a number of conclusions and recommendations contained in the report which had direct implications for the work of the Committee, including the number, nature and scope of reservations to the Convention. (A/48/18 (1993) at paragraph 13). Under the same item two years later, the Committee, in its discussion of the report of the sixth meeting of persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies (A/50/505), noted that emphasis was focused inter alia on the recent increase in the number and breadth of reservations made by States Parties upon ratification of certain treaties, which tended to undermine the letter and the spirit of human rights treaties. (A/51/18 (1996), at paragraph 575).

Subsequently, the Committee took note of the recommendations of the report of the seventh meeting of persons chairing human rights treaty bodies. With respect to recommendations which requested action by individual treaty bodies, the Committee inter alia submitted a letter to the Chairman of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities (E/CN.4/Sub.2/1997/31) which indicated recommended topics for its study by the Sub-Commission (see A/51/482, para. 53), including reservations to treaties. (A/52/18 (1997), at paragraph 654). In 1998, the Committee took note of the note of the discussion of reservations to international instruments on human rights contained in the report of the ninth meeting of persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies (A/53/125, annex). It decided to entrust two Committee members (Diaconu and Rechetov) with the task of preparing a working paper on reservations to the Convention, which was discussed at the Committee's fifty-fourth session. (A/53/18 (1998), at paragraphs 499 and 501). 654.

Australia

37. ... The Committee recommends that the State party continue making efforts to adopt appropriate legislation with a view to giving full effect to the provisions of, and withdrawing its reservation to, article 4 (a) of the Convention. (A/55/18 (2000)).

523. Members asked for clarification of Australia's reservation to article 4 (a) and in particular on the reasons for which the reservation had not been entered promptly in accordance with the terms of the reservation itself; on problems encountered in implementing article 4 of the Convention in Tasmania; on the measures taken to deal with racial violence against persons of a racial or ethnic origin different from that of the majority of Australians; on the inquiries conducted and penalties imposed following the violent action of the police against Asian students during the confrontations in June 1993; and on the conclusions of the Ombudsman following the inquiry into interracial relations in New South Wales which he had conducted at the request of the state Minister for the Maintenance of Order.

549. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt appropriate legislation with a view to withdrawing its reservation to article 4 (a) of the Convention. (A/49/18 (1994)).

Bahamas

27. The Committee notes with concern the reservations to the Convention entered by the State party, in particular the vague and general statement that the State party will not accept obligations going beyond constitutional limits or the obligation to introduce a judicial process beyond those prescribed under the Constitution.

The Committee encourages the State party to consider withdrawing all the reservations it entered upon acceding to the Convention. (A/59/18 (2004)).

Barbados

285. Members of the Committee noted that a reservation made by Barbados at the time of accession implied that the provisions of the Convention could not be invoked in the courts, which affected the implementation of articles 2, 4, 5 and 6 of the Convention. In view of that situation, the Government of Barbados should be requested to consider the possibility of withdrawing that reservation.

290. It would be appreciated [by the Committee] if the State party's next periodic report contained information as to whether it is considering withdrawing its reservation to the Convention. (A/49/18 (1994)).

Belarus

The Committee recommends that the State party consider withdrawing its reservation to article 17 of the Convention. (A/59/18 (2004)).

103. The withdrawal by the State party of its reservation to article 22 of the Convention is welcomed. (A/52/18 (1997)).

326. The members of the Committee recommended that Belarus consider withdrawing its reservation to the Convention since this reflected the tensions of an earlier age. A/50/18 (1995).

Belgium

51. ... Taking into account the mandatory nature of article 4 of the Convention, the Committee also recommends that the State party enact legislation that declares illegal and prohibits any organization which promotes or incites to racism and racial discrimination and consider withdrawing its reservation to this article. In this context, the Committee draws the attention of the State party to its general recommendation XV (A/57/18 (2002)).

Bulgaria

278. It is noted with great appreciation that the State party has made the Declaration under article 14 of the Convention, recognizing the competence of the Committee to receive communications, and the withdrawal of its reservation in relation to article 22 of the Convention is welcomed (A/52/18 (1997)).

278. The sincere dialogue between the Committee and the high-calibre delegation had been exceptional and provided many encouraging signs, such as the announcement of Bulgaria's forthcoming declaration under article 14 of the Convention, the withdrawal of its reservation to the Convention and a new census to be conducted with United Nations support, as well as the changes in domestic law, marked by the adoption of a new constitution and a number of amnesty laws and laws on restoration of lands (A/46/18 (1992)).

Fiji

81. The Committee notes with concern that the State party formulated, upon accession, declarations and reservations relating to articles 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 of the Convention. The Committee suggests that the Fijian authorities review those reservations, which are inherited from colonial times, with a view to withdrawing them, taking into account paragraph 75 of the Durban Plan of Action (A/58/18 (2003)).

474. Responding to the suggestion of the State party in its note verbale of 7 August 2002 that questions and requests for further clarification as a result of the submission of the reports be presented in advance, the Committee recommends that the State party ensure that detailed information is submitted on the following:

(b) The significance and consequences of the reservation and declarations formulated by the State party, in particular those relating to the implementation of article 5 of the Convention and indigenous rights (A/57/18 (2002)).

Hungary

109. The fact that Hungary has made the declaration under article 14 of the Convention and has withdrawn its reservation previously made in relation to article 22 of the Convention is welcomed (A/51/18 (1996)).

Iceland

393. Referring to article 4 of the Convention, the members of the Committee stressed that, although no racist organization had ever existed in Iceland, rules prohibiting such organizations must be enacted since Iceland had not formulated any reservations to article 4 of the Convention (A/49/18 (1994)).

Italy

84. With regard to the reservation made by Italy to article 6 of the Convention, members asked whether consideration was given to its withdrawal.

95. It is noted with satisfaction that Italy is one of the States parties which has made the declaration under article 14 of the Convention and that it has in practice abandoned its reservations to the Convention and instituted a procedure for their formal withdrawal (A/540/18 (1995)).

Jamaica

133. The Committee again suggests that the State party consider withdrawing its reservation to article 4 of the Convention (A/57/18 (2002)).

160. In particular, [the Committee] hoped that, by that time, Jamaica would be in a position to withdraw its reservation concerning article 4 of the Convention (A/48/18 (1993)).

Japan

169. The Committee notes the reservation maintained by the State party with respect to article 4 (a) and (b) of the Convention, stating that “Japan fulfils the obligations under those provisions to the extent that fulfilment ... is compatible with the guarantee of the rights to freedom of assembly, association and expression and other rights under the Constitution of Japan”. The Committee expresses concern that such an interpretation is in conflict with the State party’s obligations under article 4 of the Convention. The Committee draws the attention of the State party to its general recommendations VII and XV, according to which article 4 is of mandatory nature, given the non-self-executing character of all its provisions, and the prohibition of the dissemination of all ideas based upon racial superiority or hatred is compatible with the rights to freedom of opinion and expression (A/56/18 (2001)).

Malawi

559. The Committee expresses concern over the State party’s reservations to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees which, in particular, reduce the protection offered to refugees in the field of employment, access to property, right of association, education and social security.

The Committee welcomes the draft Refugee Act, which reflects the intention of the State party to withdraw these reservations, and encourages the State party to give high priority to this process. The Committee recommends, in particular, that the State party take steps to ensure that child refugees are, in practice, given access to education (A/58/18 (2003)).

Nepal

123. The Committee welcomes the information that the State party is considering withdrawing its reservations to articles 4 and 6 of the Convention and making the optional declaration provided for in article 14 (A/59/18 (2004)).

295. In view of the State party's reservation on articles 4 and 6 of the Convention, the Committee remains concerned that the full implementation of those provisions may not be ensured, and therefore reiterates its previous recommendation to the State party to consider withdrawing its reservation (A/55/18 (2000)).

435. In view of the State party's declaration on articles 4 and 6 of the Convention, the Committee repeats its suggestion to the State party that it avail itself of the possibility, under article 20, paragraph 3, of the Convention, to withdraw its reservations in order to ensure the full applicability of the provisions of articles 4 and 6 (A/53/18 (1998)).

Norway

239. In relation to article 4 of the Convention, members of the Committee stressed that, since Norway had not formulated any reservation to that article, it was bound to take the measures it provided for and to adopt instruments prohibiting all types of racist crimes and discrimination (A/49/18 (1994)).

Papua New Guinea

291. The Committee recommends that the State party consider withdrawing its reservation to article 4 of the Convention (A/58/18 (2003)).

262. [Les membres du Comité] ont également noté que ... [1] La Papouasie-Nouvelle-Guinée avait émis une réserve à propos de l'article 4 de la Convention (A/47/18 (1992)).

Poland

154. The Committee welcomes the State party's withdrawal on 16 October 1997 of its reservation to article 22 of the Convention, its declaration under article 14 of the Convention, made on 1 December 1999, recognizing the Committee's competence to receive individual complaints, and its ratification on 23 August 2002 of the amendment to article 8 of the Convention (A/58/18 (2003)).

Romania

254. Members asked whether the Government was considering making the declaration under article 14 of the Convention, according to which individuals could present communications regarding human rights violations before the Committee, or withdrawing its reservations to articles 17, 18 and 22 (A/50/18 (1995)).

Saudi Arabia

209. The broad and imprecise nature of the State party's general reservation raises concern as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention. The Committee encourages the State party to review the reservation with a view to formally withdrawing it (A/58/18 (2003)).

Spain

172. While noting that the State party has made the declaration provided for in article 14 of the Convention, the Committee recommends that the State party review its reservation under article 14, which imposes a restrictive deadline of three months instead of six after the exhaustion of domestic remedies, for the submission of communications to the Committee (A/55/18 (2000)).

200. The commitment expressed by the delegation on behalf of the Government to make the declaration under article 14 of the Convention, to withdraw the reservation to article 22 of the Convention and to consider the ratification of the amendments to article 8, paragraph 6, of the Convention adopted at the 14th meeting of States Parties is welcomed (A/51/18 (1996)).

487. The members of the Committee expressed the hope that the State party would consider making the declaration under article 14 of the Convention and withdrawing its reservation to article 22 of the Convention (A/49/18 (1994)).

Sweden

186. In relation to article 4 of the Convention, members of the Committee noted the will of Sweden not to prohibit by legislative measures organizations qualified as racist. However, such measures were compulsory for States parties which had not entered reservations to article 4 of the Convention (A/49/18 (1994)).

Switzerland

255. Noting that the former "three-circle" immigration policy of Switzerland which classified foreigners according to categories of national origin and capacity for integration was abandoned and replaced by a binary admissions system and in view of the dialogue held with the Swiss delegation in this respect, the Committee invites the State party to consider if the reservation to article 2 (1) (a) of the Convention is still necessary or may be withdrawn (A/57/18 (2002)).

62. The Committee urges the State party to review those elements of its current immigration policy that classify foreigners on the basis of their national origin, and recommends that it reconsider the reservation made to article 2, paragraph 1 (a), of the Convention (A/53/18 (1998)).

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland

396. Members of the Committee asked whether the United Kingdom was considering withdrawing, or at least reducing to a minimum, its reservations and statements of interpretation with regard to the Convention, concerning articles 4 and 6 in particular. They wished to know why the reservations relating to Rhodesia and Fiji had not yet been withdrawn.

422. The Committee encouraged the State party to review its interpretative statements and reservations, in particular, those with regard to articles 4 and 6 of the Convention, with a view to withdrawing them (A/48/18 (1993)).

United States of America

391. The Committee emphasizes its concern about the State party's far-reaching reservations, understandings and declarations entered at the time of ratification of the Convention. The Committee is particularly concerned about the implication of the State party's reservation on the implementation of article 4 of the Convention. In this regard the Committee recalls its general recommendations VII and XV, according to which the prohibition of dissemination of all ideas based upon racial superiority or hatred is compatible with the right to freedom of opinion and expression, given that a citizen's exercise of this right carries special duties and responsibilities, among which is the obligation not to disseminate racist ideas. The Committee recommends that the State party review its legislation in view of the new requirements of preventing and combating racial discrimination, and adopt regulations extending the protection against acts of racial discrimination, in accordance with article 4 of the Convention (A/56/18 (2001)).

Viet Nam

340. Members of the Committee expressed the hope that the State party would give serious consideration to making the declaration under article 14 of the Convention and would also undertake to withdraw its reservations to the Convention.

358. The Committee expressed the hope that the State party would consider making the declaration under article 14 of the Convention and recommended that the State party should seriously consider withdrawing its reservations under the Convention (A/48/18 (1993)).

Yemen

462. While noting that the State party has provided information under article 5 of the Convention despite the reservations lodged, the Committee invites the State party to continue to provide specific information on how this article is implemented and to consider formally withdrawing those reservations.

463. Given recent political developments, the Committee also invites the State party to consider formally withdrawing its reservations to articles 17, 18 and 20 of the Convention (A/57/18 (2002)).

B. Human Rights Committee

Positive remarks

On five occasions the Committee:

- welcomed a State party's withdrawal of one or more reservations (Iceland, Ireland, Republic of Korea, Switzerland, United Kingdom).

On one occasion the Committee:

- welcomed a State party's withdrawal of some of its reservations to the Covenant, while noting that it would have been appreciated if the reasons for these withdrawals and the precise nature of their effect had been more clearly explained (Austria);
- noted with appreciation the withdrawal of several reservations made upon ratification of the Covenant (Ireland);
- welcomed the partial withdrawal of a reservation to a certain article (Norway);
- welcomed a State party's accession without any reservation to various international human rights instruments (Gabon);
- appreciated the efforts made towards the withdrawal of the State party's reservation in connection with a certain article of the Covenant (Norway);
- commended the State party for ratifying the Covenant without entering any reservations (Paraguay);
- welcomed a State party's accession to an instrument (Second Optional Protocol), though with a reservation (Azerbaijan).
- noted and welcomed the statement of the State party's delegation on the probable withdrawal of some of the State party's reservations to the Covenant, although it considered the statement open to doubt (Liechtenstein);
- noted with satisfaction the assurances of the State party's Government that its declaration regarding the federal system was not a reservation and was not intended to affect its international obligations (United States of America);
- noted with satisfaction that the State party was currently studying the possibility of withdrawing the reservations that it had made with respect to the Covenant (Republic of Korea);

Neutral remarks

On one occasion the Committee:

- took note of the comments of the State party's delegation on the limited, or even theoretical, scope of the reservations formulated by it to various provisions of the Covenant (Luxembourg);
- stated that it was aware of a reservation, but took the view that once action was taken due to the reservation would not have been required, it had to conform to the Covenant (and in the instant case did not) (Hong Kong SAR);

- while noting the State party's [general] reservation to article 9 of the Covenant, considered that that reservation did not exclude, inter alia, the obligation to comply with the requirement to inform promptly the person concerned of the reasons for his or her arrest. The Committee was also of the view that preventive detention is a restriction on liberty imposed as a response to the conduct of the individual concerned, that the decision as to continued detention must be considered as a determination falling within the meaning of article 14, paragraph 1, of the Covenant, and that proceedings to decide the continuation of detention must, therefore, comply with that provision. The Committee recommended that the requirements of article 9, paragraph 2, of the Covenant be complied with in respect of all detainees. The question of continued detention should be determined by an independent and impartial tribunal, constituted and operating in accordance with article 14, paragraph 1, of the Covenant (India);
- noted that the provisions of the Covenant were extended by the State party to a territorial possession with certain reservations, particularly in regard to particular articles (Macau);
- noted the mandate given to a State party's federal administration to examine the question of the removal of reservations to human rights treaties and hoped that by the time the next report was considered all reservations to the Covenant would have been withdrawn (Switzerland);
- noted that the withdrawal of a State party's reservations to a certain article was currently under consideration by its executive (Switzerland);
- was concerned at a particular practice in an overseas territory, given that it was not one of the territories to which a relevant reservation had been applied (United Kingdom);
- with reference to the withdrawal of the State party's reservation to a certain article, urged the authorities to introduce further reforms to secure all their inhabitants the full exercise of the rights conferred by that article (United Kingdom);

Negative remarks

On two occasions the Committee:

- recommended that the State party review the continuing need for any reservation, with a view to withdrawing them (Denmark and Iceland);

On one occasion the Committee:

- found that a State party's interpretative declaration regarding articles 2 and 3 contravened the State party's essential obligations under the Covenant and was therefore without legal effect and did not affect the powers of the Committee. The Committee thus urged the State party to withdraw formally both the interpretative declarations and the reservations (Kuwait);

- referring to its General Comment No. 24 on reservations, noted that a State party's interpretative declarations and reservations raised the serious issue of their compatibility with the object and purpose of the Covenant. In particular, the Committee noted that articles 2 and 3 of the Covenant constituted core rights and overarching principles of international law that cannot be subject to general domestic limitations, which would undermine the object and purpose of the entire Covenant (Kuwait);
- was particularly concerned at reservations to articles 6 and 7 of the Covenant, which it believed to be incompatible with the object and purpose of the Covenant (United States of America);
- strongly recommended that the State party review its remaining reservations, with a view to their eventual withdrawal (Republic of Korea);
- stated that a State party should reconsider its reservations with a view to ensuring, insofar as possible, that they were withdrawn (Luxembourg);
- found that the continued maintenance of a State party's reservations to certain provisions of the Covenant amounted to a particular factors or difficulties which might impede the effective implementation of the Covenant's provisions by the State party (Denmark);
- stated it would have been appreciated if a State party's reasons for the maintenance of certain reservations had been more clearly explained (Austria);
- regretted that a State party had not withdrawn its reservations to the Covenant, in particular certain ones, and stated that the State party should reconsider its position on this matter (Belgium);
- regretted the decision of the State party not to withdraw any of its reservations under the Covenant (United Kingdom);
- regretted that a State party had not withdrawn its reservations to the Covenant and urged its Government to reconsider its position in particular with regard to a certain article (Belgium);
- regretted the extent of the State party's reservations, declarations and understandings to the Covenant, believing that that, taken together, they intended to ensure that the State party had accepted only what was already its law (United States of America);
- continued to regret the extent of State party's reservations to the Covenant and that it had yet not envisaged withdrawing some of them (Italy);
- stated that it found the State party's explanation for its reservation's necessity not persuasive and suggested alternative measures (Belgium);

- regretted that a State party had maintained its reservation to an article of the Covenant and called on the State party to withdraw the reservation and bring its domestic law into line with the Covenant (Congo);
- regretted the maintenance of a reservation to an article of the Covenant, which did not reflect the Committee's more expansive approach to the article (Switzerland);
- continued to be disappointed that the State party had not decided to withdraw any of the reservations entered at its ratification of the Covenant and stated that the State party should continue to consider withdrawal of some or all of the reservations (Denmark);
- regretted that a State party maintained its reservations, in particular regarding a non-derogable article and concerning the Optional Protocol which partially limited the substantive competence of the Committee, and stated that the State party should consider withdrawing its reservations (Germany);
- regretted the decision of the State party not to withdraw any of the reservations it made at the time of ratification of the Covenant, and recommended that they be reviewed with a view to withdrawing them (Sweden);
- regretted that a State party had made a reservation excluding the competence of the Committee under the Optional Protocol with regard to violation of a substantive right of the Covenant (Germany);
- remained concerned that the State party had not seen fit to withdraw its reservations to the Covenant (Switzerland);
- was concerned about the existence of numerous interpretative declarations and a reservation made by the State party and stated that it should reduce the number of those interpretative declarations (Monaco);
- encouraged a State party to review interpretative declarations and a reservation, particularly those that had become or were becoming obsolete and unnecessary in the light of developments that had taken place or were taking place in the State party, especially with regard to certain articles of the Covenant (Monaco);
- urged a State party to formally withdraw its reservation (Guyana);
- considered that a reservation seriously affected the application of an article of the Covenant and thus remained concerned that certain persons may not enjoy effective protection from a breach of that article (Hong Kong SAR);

- noted that the reservations entered by a State party upon ratification of the Covenant with respect to a number of provisions had an adverse effect on the effective implementation of the Covenant. It stated that no convincing reasons had been offered for the reservations to two articles and that, given the actual situation of human rights protection in the State party, some reservations might now have become obsolete (Malta);
- recommended that a State party's remaining reservations be reconsidered with a view to their eventual withdrawal (Iceland);
- noting a State party's reservations and declarations, invited the State party to review those reservations and declarations with a view to withdrawing them, so as to ensure progress in the implementation of those rights within the context of article 40 of the Covenant (India);
- recommended that further action be taken to ensure full implementation of the Covenant in the matter of withdrawal of the State party's remaining reservations to the Covenant (Ireland);
- considered the explanation by a State party's delegation for its remaining reservations to remain open to doubt, and stated that the State party should continue to review the possibility of the withdrawal of all its reservations to the Covenant (Liechtenstein);
- suggested that a State party's should seriously consider withdrawing its reservation to a certain article, so that the article might be implemented in the spirit of the Covenant. The authorities' attention was drawn inter alia to General Comment No. 24 (52) on issues relating to reservations made upon ratification or accession to the Covenant (Switzerland);
- suggested that the State party's Government actively study the possibility of withdrawing its general reservation bearing upon a certain article and take other measures with a view to increasing public awareness of the provisions of the Covenant and the Optional Protocol (Republic of Korea);
- noted that the reservations entered by a State party upon ratification of the Covenant with respect to a number of provisions had an adverse effect on the full implementation of the Covenant, and stated that consideration ought to be given to the withdrawal of some, or all, of those reservations (Denmark);
- noted that there are no particular factors or difficulties that might prevent the effective implementation of the provisions of the Covenant in the State party, with the exception of its maintenance of reservations to certain articles (Switzerland);
- found that reservations and declarations made by the State party ratifying the Covenant and consequent non-reporting on many issues related to such reservations and declarations, which might bear directly or indirectly on the enjoyment of Covenant rights, made it difficult to assess fully and comprehensively the situation in regard to human rights in the State party (France);

- stated that it would welcome a State party's reconsideration of its reservations and declarations (France);
- stated that the State party should finalize its review of reservations relating to an article 10 of the Covenant with a view to withdrawing them at the earliest possible date (New Zealand);
- recommended that the State party consider a complete withdrawal of its reservations (Norway);
- recommended that the State party review its reservations, declarations and understandings with a view to withdrawing them, in particular reservations to article 6, paragraph 5, and article 7 of the Covenant (United States of America);
- recommended that the State party review, with a view to withdrawing, the reservations made upon ratification of the Covenant, particularly those concerning articles 13 and 14 of the Covenant (Malta);
- recommended that the State party review its reservations relating to certain articles 10 and 22 of the Covenant with a view to withdrawing them (New Zealand);
- recommended that the State party review its reservations with a view to withdrawing the greatest possible number (Belgium);
- recommended that the State party review its reservations to the Covenant with a view to withdrawing them (Malta);
- invited the State party to review the reservations and interpretative declarations it made upon ratification with a view to withdrawing them as far as possible (Luxembourg);
- recommended that the State party's authorities consider amending relevant legislation to enable a withdrawal of the reservation to an article of the Covenant (United Kingdom);
- recommended that a careful study of a recently enacted law be undertaken with regard to the scope of a certain article of the Covenant, with a view to withdrawing the reservation made in that connection (Norway);
- hoped that the pending legislation relevant to a certain article would be formulated in such a way as to allow the reservation thereunder to be withdrawn (Iceland);

Comments with respect to other treaties

On one occasion:

- the Committee recalled that, although several reservations were made by the State party in acceding to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, Morocco remains bound to the fullest extent by the provisions of articles 2, 3, 23 and 26 of the Covenant.

Miscellaneous

For many years, the Committee's Annual Report has noted in its initial chapter that reservations and other declarations made by a number of States parties in respect of the Covenant and/or the Optional Protocols are set out in the notifications deposited with the Secretary-General. On occasion, it has then proceeded:

(a) to note and welcome withdrawal of a particular reservation, encouraging other States to do likewise (Switzerland, A/59/40 (2004), at 6);

(b) to note a particular withdrawal (Cyprus, A/58/40 (2003) at 6, Belarus, Republic of Korea and United Kingdom (A/48/40 (1993) at 4);

(c) to note with regret that no reservations to the Covenant had been withdrawn during the reporting period and to encourage States parties to consider the possibility of withdrawing reservations to the Covenant (A/57/40 (2002), at 7, and A/56/40 (2001), at 7).

(d) to note generally that in the period under review several reservations had been withdrawn (A/55/40 (2000), at 7).

This section of the Annual Report has also reflected other State party or depositary practice, such as objections to reservations (Botswana, A/57/40 (2002), at 8) or acceptance by the depositary of a modification to a reservation not objected to over a 12 month period (Azerbaijan, A/57/40 (2002), at 9).

Sometime, the Annual Report has reflected other aspects of its approach to reservations. In A/52/40 (1997), at 42, under an item entitled "Links to other human rights treaties and treaty bodies," the Committee observed that other human rights treaties were relevant in the context of reservations. There was particular concern about States that have made reservations to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women with regard to obligations that they had accepted without reservation under the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. The Committee undertook to press such States to clarify their position with regard to the rights at issue, reaffirming that a reservation to another human rights treaty could not in any way diminish the obligations of a State under the Covenant.

A series of reports have detailed the Committee's interaction with the process of the International Law Commission (ILC) on this issue. In A/58/40 (2003), at 27, the Committee referred to its consultations of 31 July 2003 with members of the ILC on the issue of reservations to multilateral treaties. It welcomed the constructive and open dialogue with the ILC and expressed the hope that further consultations on the issue of reservations would be organized.

Earlier reports also detailed the Committee's interaction with the ILC. In A/53/40 (1998), at 2, the Committee recorded that on 24 November 1997, Mr. Alain Pellet, ILC Chairman and Special Rapporteur on reservations, wrote to the Committee's Chairperson to invite it to comment on the ILC's Preliminary Conclusions on Reservations to Normative Multilateral Treaties, including human rights treaties. The Preliminary Conclusions were considered at the sixty-second session in the light of the Committee's General Comment on issues relating to reservations made on ratifications of the Covenant or the Optional Protocol. On 9 April 1998, the Committee decided that the Chairperson would write to Mr. Pellet to inform him of the Committee's first reactions to the Preliminary Conclusions (letter annexed at IX). The letter indicated that the Committee would study the Preliminary Conclusions more carefully and formulate its comments at a later stage. A working group of the Committee had taken up the matter again at the sixty-third session and was preparing a further response for the Committee to consider at its sixty-fourth session.

Thereafter, A/54/40 (1999), at 23, records that on 24 November 1997, Mr. Pellet, wrote to the Committee's Chair to invite the Committee to comment on the Commission's Preliminary Conclusions on Reservations to Normative Multilateral Treaties, including Human Rights Treaties. Following consideration of the Preliminary Conclusions in the light of the Committee's general comment on issues relating to reservations to the Covenant or to the Optional Protocol, the Chairperson sent the Committee's comments to the ILC a letter dated 5 November 1998 (annex VI).

Reports also detail the Committee's evolving work on its General Comment 24, beginning with its adoption of a decision to commence preparatory work on 24 July 1992 (A/47/40 (1992) at 605), through to its later reaffirmation of that decision (A/48/40 (1993), at 758), the commencement and work of a working group on the issue leading up to adoption (A/49/40 (1994), at paragraph 373, and A/50/40 (1995) at 13).

Austria

181. The Committee welcomes the withdrawal by Austria of some of its reservations to the Covenant; it would have been appreciated if the reasons for these withdrawals and the precise nature of their effect, as well as the reasons for the maintenance of the remaining reservations, had been more clearly explained. (A/54/40 (1999)).

Azerbaijan

4. The Committee welcomes the abolition of the death penalty in 1998 as well as the State party's accession to the Second Optional Protocol to the Covenant, though with a reservation relating to wartime. (A/57/40 (2002))

Belgium

7. The Committee regrets that Belgium has not withdrawn its reservations to the Covenant, in particular the reservations to articles 10 and 14.

The State party should reconsider its position on this matter (A/59/40 (2004)).

82. The Committee regrets that Belgium has not withdrawn its reservations to the Covenant and urges the Government to reconsider its position in particular with regard to article 10. The Government's explanation that the reservation is necessary because there is a problem of overcrowding in prisons is not persuasive. In addition, alternative sentences, including to community service, should be encouraged in view of its rehabilitative function (A/54/40 (1999)).

430. Il recommande enfin que l'Etat partie revoie ses réserves afin d'en retirer le plus grand nombre possible (A/47/40 (1992)).

Congo

283. The Committee regrets that the Republic of the Congo has maintained its reservation to article 11 of the Covenant.

284. It calls on the State party to withdraw that reservation, bring articles 386 to 393 of the Code of Civil, Commercial, Administrative and Financial Procedure into line with the Covenant, and make sure that no one is imprisoned for debt (A/55/40 (2000)).

Denmark

10. The Committee continues to be disappointed that Denmark has not decided to withdraw any of the reservations entered at its ratification of the Covenant.

Denmark should continue to consider withdrawal of some or all of the reservations (A/56/40 (2001)).

64. The Committee finds that there are no particular factors or difficulties which may impede the effective implementation of the Covenant's provisions by the Kingdom of Denmark, except for the continued maintenance of Denmark's reservations to certain provisions of the Covenant.

66. The Committee notes that the reservations entered by Denmark upon ratification of the Covenant with respect to a number of provisions have an adverse effect on the full implementation of the Covenant. Consideration ought to be given to the withdrawal of some, or all, of those reservations.

72. The Committee also recommends that the Government review the continuing need for any reservation, with a view to withdrawing them (A/52/40 (1997)).

France

390. The Committee finds that reservations and declarations made by France when ratifying the Covenant and consequent non-reporting on many issues related to such reservations and declarations, which may bear directly or indirectly on the enjoyment of Covenant rights, make it difficult to assess fully and comprehensively the situation in regard to human rights in France.

414. The Committee recommends that the State party submit its next report in time and that the report include a comprehensive assessment regarding the implementation of provisions of the Covenant, including in particular articles 9 and 14, and particulars of the cultural, religious and linguistic rights of ethnic groups and inhabitants of the Overseas territories. The Committee would welcome reconsideration by France of the reservations and declarations made by it (A/52/40 (1997)).

Gabon

121. The Committee welcomes Gabon's accession without any reservation to various international human rights instruments (A/52/40 (1997)).

Germany

10. The Committee regrets that Germany maintains its reservations, in particular regarding article 15, paragraph 1, of the Covenant, a non-derogable right, and those made when the Optional Protocol was ratified by the State party which partially limits the competence of the Committee with respect to article 26 of the Covenant.

The State party should consider withdrawing its reservations (A/59/40 (2004)).

184. The Committee regrets that Germany has made a reservation excluding the competence of the Committee under the Optional Protocol with regard to violation of rights as protected by article 26 of the Covenant (A/52/40 (1997)).

Guinea

516. It was also asked whether Guinea intended to maintain its reservation to article 48, paragraph 1, of the Covenant and accede to the Optional Protocol (A/48/40 (1993)).

Guyana

357. The State party is urged to implement fully the Committee's Views in communication No. 676/1996 and to formally withdraw its reservation made on its reaccession to the Optional Protocol. The State party should consider adopting appropriate procedures for taking into account the Committee's Views under the Optional Protocol (A/55/40 (2000)).

Hong Kong (Special Administrative Region)

245. In the light of the fact that the Covenant is applied in HKSAR subject to a reservation that seriously affects the application of article 13 in relation to decision-making procedures in deportation cases, the Committee remains concerned that persons facing a risk of imposition of the death penalty or of torture, or inhuman, cruel or degrading treatment as a consequence of their deportation from HKSAR may not enjoy effective protection (A/55/40 (2000)).

65. The Committee is aware of the reservation made by the United Kingdom that article 25 of the Covenant does not require establishment of an elected executive or legislative council. However, it takes the view that once an elected legislative council is established, its election must conform to article 25. The Committee considers that the electoral system in Hong Kong does not meet the requirements of article 25, or of articles 2, 3 and 26 of the Covenant. It underscores in particular the fact that only 20 of 60 seats in the Legislative Council are subject to direct popular election and that the concept of functional constituencies, which gives undue weight to the views of the business community, discriminates among voters on the basis of property and functions. That clearly constitutes a violation of article 2, paragraph 1 and articles 25 (b) and 26 (A/51/40 (1996)).

Hungary

651. Some members of the Committee suggested that the general reservation entered by Hungary upon ratifying the Covenant should be withdrawn. They also noted that certain provisions of the Covenant had not been given constitutional status but as yet had only the force of law (A/48/40 (1993)).

Iceland

57. The Committee welcomes the fact that Iceland has withdrawn its reservation to articles 8, paragraph 3 (a), and 13 of the Covenant.

61. While noting that the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms has been incorporated into Icelandic law, the Committee emphasizes that a number of articles of the Covenant, including articles 3, 4, 12, 22, 24, 25, 26 and 27, go beyond the provisions of the European Convention.

The Committee therefore encourages the State party to ensure that all rights protected under the Covenant are given effect in Icelandic law. The Committee recommends that the remaining reservations to the Covenant be reconsidered with a view to their eventual withdrawal (A/54/40 (1999)).

77. The Committee hopes that the pending legislation relevant to article 13 will be formulated in such a way as to allow the reservation thereunder to be withdrawn.

81. The Committee also recommends that the Government review the continuing need for any reservation, with a view to withdrawing them (A/49/40 (1994)).

India

429. The Committee, noting the reservations and declarations made by the Government of India to articles 1, 9, 12, 13, 19, paragraph 3, and 21 and 22 of the Covenant, invites the State party to review those reservations and declarations with a view to withdrawing them, so as to ensure progress in the implementation of those rights within the context of article 40 of the Covenant.

439. The Committee regrets that the use of special powers of detention remains widespread. While noting the State party's reservation to article 9 of the Covenant, the Committee considers that that reservation does not exclude, inter alia, the obligation to comply with the requirement to inform promptly the person concerned of the reasons for his or her arrest. The Committee is also of the view that preventive detention is a restriction on liberty imposed as a response to the conduct of the individual concerned, that the decision as to continued detention must be considered as a determination falling within the meaning of article 14, paragraph 1, of the Covenant, and that proceedings to decide the continuation of detention must, therefore, comply with that provision. The Committee recommends that the requirements of article 9, paragraph 2, of the Covenant be complied with in respect of all detainees. The question of continued detention should be determined by an independent and impartial tribunal, constituted and operating in accordance with article 14, paragraph 1, of the Covenant. It further recommends, at the very least, that a central register of detainees under preventive detention laws be maintained and that the State party accept the admission of the International Committee of the Red Cross and Red Crescent to all types of detention facilities, particularly in areas of conflict (A/52/40 (1997)).

Ireland

425. The Committee notes with appreciation the increased use of the Covenant by the courts as an aid to the interpretation of common law and constitutional rights, and the withdrawal of several reservations made upon ratification of the Covenant.

450. The Committee recommends that further action be taken to ensure full implementation of the Covenant in these matters:

- (a) Withdrawal of the remaining reservations to the Covenant (A/55/40 (2000)).

580. Members also welcomed the recent adherence of Ireland to the Second Optional Protocol, aiming at the abolition of the death penalty and the withdrawal of its reservation concerning article 6 of the Covenant.

596. The Committee welcomes the adherence of Ireland to the Optional Protocol, the withdrawal of its reservation regarding the death penalty and its subsequent adherence to the Second Optional Protocol, aiming at the abolition of the death penalty, as well as the announcement that legislative preparations are under way in Ireland with a view to acceding to other major human rights instruments (A/48/40 (1993)).

Italy

276. The Committee continues to regret the extent of State party's reservations to the Covenant and that it has yet not envisaged withdrawing some of them.

282. The Committee recommends that the State party review its reservations to the Covenant with a view to withdrawing them (A/49/40 (1994)).

Kuwait

456. The Committee, referring to its General Comment No. 24 on reservations, notes that the "interpretative declarations" of the State party regarding article 2, paragraph 1, article 3, and article 23, as well as the "reservations" concerning article 25 (b) of the Covenant raise the serious issue of their compatibility with the object and purpose of the Covenant. In particular, the Committee notes that articles 2 and 3 of the Covenant constitute core rights and overarching principles of international law that cannot be subject to "limits set by Kuwaiti law". Such broad and general limitations would undermine the object and purpose of the entire Covenant.

457. The Committee finds that the interpretative declaration regarding articles 2 and 3 contravenes the State party's essential obligations under the Covenant and is therefore without legal effect and does not affect the powers of the Committee. The State party is urged to withdraw formally both the interpretative declarations and the reservations (A/55/40 (2000)).

Liechtenstein

5. While the Committee notes and welcomes the delegation's statement on the probable withdrawal of some of the State party's reservations to the Covenant, that statement as well as the explanation for the remaining reservations remain open to doubt.

The State party should continue to review the possibility of the withdrawal of all its reservations to the Covenant (A/59/40 (2004)).

Luxembourg

4. The Committee takes note of the Luxembourg delegation's comments on the limited, or even theoretical, scope of the reservations formulated by the State party to various provisions of the Covenant.

The State party should reconsider its reservations with a view to ensuring, insofar as possible, that they are withdrawn A/58/40 (2003).

145. ... The Committee also invites the State party to review the reservations and interpretative declarations it made upon ratification with a view to withdrawing them as far as possible (A/48/40 (1993)).

Macau

311. The Committee notes that given the late extension of the Covenant to Macau, the Sino-Portuguese Joint Declaration and Exchange of Memoranda of 13 April 1987 does not refer to it and merely states that the laws currently in force in Macau will remain basically unchanged and that all rights and freedoms of the inhabitants and other persons in Macau, including the rights of the person, freedom of speech, of the press, of assembly, of association, of travel and of movement, the right to strike, the choice of occupation, to undertake academic research, freedom of religion and belief and of communication and the right to own property will be ensured by law in the Macau Special Administrative Region. That was followed by a Memorandum of Understanding between the People's Republic of China and the Government of Portugal, signed by their respective Ambassadors, for extension of the Covenant to Macau with reservations, and thereafter by resolution 41/92 of the Assembly of the Portuguese Republic of 31 December 1992, stipulating that the provisions of the Covenant were extended to Macau with certain reservations, particularly in regard to article 12, paragraphs 4 and 13. The Committee notes that article 40 of the Basic Law of the Macau Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China, adopted by the People's Congress on 31 March 1993, states that the provisions of the Covenant shall continue in force after 19 December 1999 and shall be implemented through the laws of the Macau Special Administrative Region (A/52/40 (1997)).

Malta

126. The Committee notes that the reservations entered by Malta upon ratification of the Covenant with respect to a number of provisions have an adverse effect on the effective implementation of the Covenant. No convincing reasons have been offered for the reservations to articles 13 and 14, paragraph 6. Additionally, given the actual situation of human rights protection in Malta, some reservations may now have become obsolete.

129. The Committee also recommends that the Government review, with a view to withdrawing, the reservations made upon ratification of the Covenant, particularly those concerning articles 13 and 14 of the Covenant (A/49/40 (1994)).

Monaco

4. The Committee is concerned about the existence of six interpretative declarations and one reservation made by the State party when ratifying the Covenant.

The State party should reduce the number of those interpretative declarations. The Committee encourages it to review them, particularly those that have become or are becoming obsolete and unnecessary in the light of developments that have taken place or are taking place in the State party, especially with regard to articles 13, 14, 19 and 25 (c), of the Covenant (A/56/40 (2001)).

Morocco

118. The Committee emphasizes the need for the Government to prevent and eliminate discriminatory attitudes and prejudices towards women and to revise domestic legislation to bring it into conformity with articles 2, 3 and 23 of the Covenant, taking into account the recommendations contained in the Committee's general comments Nos. 4, 18 and 19. It recalls in that regard that, although several reservations were made by Morocco in acceding to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, Morocco remains bound to the fullest extent by the provisions of articles 2, 3, 23 and 26 of the Covenant (A/50/40 (1995)).

New Zealand

15. The State party should finalize its review of its reservations relating to article 10 of the Covenant with a view to withdrawing them at the earliest possible date (A/57/40 (2002)).

190. The Committee recommends that the State party review its reservations relating to articles 10 and 22 of the Covenant with a view to withdrawing them (A/54/40 (1995)).

Norway

77. The Committee welcomes the partial withdrawal of the reservation to article 14, paragraph 5, but recommends that the State party consider a complete withdrawal. (A/55/40 (2000)).

88. ... While noting that it is still not possible to appeal against the reversal by the Court of Appeal of an acquittal by a lower jurisdiction, the Committee also appreciates the efforts made towards the withdrawal of Norway's reservation in connection with article 14, paragraph 5, of the Covenant.

96. The Committee recommends that a careful study of the recently enacted amendment to the Criminal Procedure Act be undertaken with regard to the scope of article 14, paragraph 5, of the Covenant, with a view to withdrawing the reservation made in that connection (A/49/40 (1994)).

Paraguay

196. The Committee also commends the State party for ratifying the Covenant without entering any reservations (A/54/40 (1995)).

Republic of Korea

153. The Committee welcomes the withdrawal by the State party of its reservations on articles 23, paragraph 4, and 14, paragraph 7. It strongly recommends that the State party review the remaining reservations on articles 14, paragraph 5, and 22 with a view to their eventual withdrawal (A/55/40 (2000)).

512. Le Comité note également avec satisfaction que la République de Corée étudie actuellement la possibilité de lever les réserves qu'elle avait faites à l'égard du Pacte.

518. Enfin, le Comité suggère que le gouvernement de l'Etat partie étudie activement la possibilité de lever sa réserve générale touchant l'article 14 et prenne d'autres mesures en vue de mieux faire connaître à son opinion publique les dispositions du Pacte et du Protocole facultatif (A/47/40 (1992)).

Sweden

83. The Committee regrets the decision of the State party not to withdraw any of the reservations it made at the time of ratification of the Covenant.

93. The Committee recommends that the reservations made to the Covenant be reviewed with a view to withdrawing them (A/51/40 (1996)).

Switzerland

5. The Committee remains concerned that the State party has not seen fit to withdraw its reservations to the Covenant. It notes the mandate given to the federal administration to examine the question of the removal of reservations to human rights treaties and hopes that by the time the next report is considered all reservations to the Covenant will have been withdrawn (A/57/40 (2002)).

88. The Committee notes that there are no particular factors or difficulties that might prevent the effective implementation of the provisions of the Covenant in Switzerland, with the exception of the maintenance by Switzerland of its reservations to certain articles.

90. The Committee welcomes the withdrawal of the reservation made by Switzerland to article 20, paragraph 2, of the Covenant and notes that the withdrawal of Switzerland's reservations to article 14, paragraphs 1, 3 (d) and (f), and 5, is currently under consideration by the Federal Council.

96. The Committee regrets the maintenance of Switzerland's reservation to article 26 of the Covenant, which limits the applicability of the principle of the equality of all persons before the law and of the prohibition of discrimination to only those rights which are contained in the Covenant, whereas article 26 of the Covenant, as interpreted by the Committee, extends it to every area regulated and protected by the public authorities.

106. The Committee suggests that the authorities should seriously consider withdrawing the reservation made by Switzerland to article 26 of the Covenant, so that the article may be implemented, in the spirit of the Covenant, as an autonomous right guaranteeing non-discrimination in all spheres regulated and protected by the State. The authorities' attention is drawn to General Comment No. 18 (37) on non-discrimination and to General Comment No. 24 (52) on issues relating to reservations made upon ratification or accession to the Covenant or the Optional Protocols thereto, or in relation to declarations under article 41 of the Covenant (A/52/40 (1997)).

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland

35. The Committee is concerned at the mixing of accused and convicted prisoners, especially since St. Helena is not one of the overseas territories to which a reservation to article 10, paragraph 2 (a), of the Covenant has been applied.

The State party should ensure that accused and convicted prisoners are appropriately segregated (A/57/40 (2002)).

301. The Committee welcomes the withdrawal on 2 February 1993 of the State party's reservation to subparagraph (c) of article 25 which, inter alia, applied to jury service in the Isle of Man.

308. The Committee recommends that the authorities in Jersey consider amending relevant legislation to enable a withdrawal of the reservation to article 11 of the Covenant.

312. With reference to the withdrawal of the State party's reservation to article 25, the Committee urges the authorities to introduce further reforms that secure all their inhabitants full right of participation in the conduct of public affairs (A/55/40 (2000)).

417. The Committee also regrets the decision of the State party not to withdraw any of its reservations under the Covenant.

428. The State party is recommended to review the reservations which it has made to the Covenant (A/50/40 (1995)).

United States of America

277. The Committee further notes with satisfaction the assurances of the Government that its declaration regarding the federal system is not a reservation and is not intended to affect the international obligations of the United States.

279. The Committee regrets the extent of the State party's reservations, declarations and understandings to the Covenant. It believes that, taken together, they intended to ensure that the United States has accepted only what is already the law of the United States. The Committee is also particularly concerned at reservations to article 6, paragraph 5, and article 7 of the Covenant, which it believes to be incompatible with the object and purpose of the Covenant.

292. The Committee recommends that the State party review its reservations, declarations and understandings with a view to withdrawing them, in particular reservations to article 6, paragraph 5, and article 7 of the Covenant (A/54/40 (1995)).

C. Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights

Positive remarks

On one occasion the Committee:

- welcomed a State party's adherence without reservations (Zimbabwe);
- warmly welcomed a withdrawal of reservations (Hong Kong SAR);
- welcomed a State party's statement that it was in the process of reviewing human rights treaty reservations, with a view to withdrawing those superseded by legislation or practice (United Kingdom).

Neutral remarks

On one occasion the Committee,

- noted a State party's statement of intent to withdraw a reservation (New Zealand);
- took note of the fact that a State party had maintained a reservation (Sweden);
- was concerned that a practice contravened a provision, while noting that the State party had made a reservation (Japan).

Critical remarks

On five occasions, the Committee recommended withdrawal simpliciter of a reservation (Congo, Hong Kong SAR, France, Sweden, Trinidad and Tobago).

On one occasion the Committee,

- was particularly concerned that a State party had no intention of withdrawing reservations, based on the argument that the State party had to a large extent already achieved realization of those rights, whereas information received by the Committee revealed that full realization of those rights was not yet guaranteed (Japan);
- encouraged a State party to withdraw a reservation to the Covenant (New Zealand);
- urged a State party to consider withdrawal of reservations (Japan);
- encouraged a State party to withdraw reservations that had become redundant (United Kingdom);
- encouraged the State party to carry out its intention to withdraw a reservation (Netherlands);
- regretted the absence of plans to withdraw a reservation (Mexico). It then went on to call upon a State party to comply with its obligations under the article in question and to withdraw its reservation under that article;
- stated that when a State party had ratified the Covenant without making any reservations, it was obliged to comply with all the provisions of the Covenant (Morocco).

Miscellaneous issues

The Committee examined issues of reservations in the context of its discussion of a draft Optional Protocol for the Covenant (see E/1997/22 (1996), at paragraph 56).

Congo

214. It also recommends that the State party withdraw its reservation to article 13, paragraphs 3 and 4, of the Covenant (E/2001/22 (2000)).

France

874. The Committee recommends that the State party withdraw its reservation with regard to article 27 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and that it ratify the Framework Convention on the Protection of National Minorities, as well as the European Charter for Regional and Minority Languages, signed by State members of the Council of Europe in 1995 and 1992, respectively (E/2002/22 (2001)).

Hong Kong Special Administrative Region

166. The Committee warmly welcomes the withdrawal by the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region of reservations to articles 1 and 7 of the Covenant.

191. The Committee recommends that the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region withdraw its reservation on article 6 of the Covenant and the interpretative declaration replacing its former reservation on article 8 (E/2002/22 (2001)).

Japan

590. The Committee is particularly concerned that the State party has no intention of withdrawing its reservations to articles 7 (d), 8, paragraph 2, and article 13, paragraph 2 (b) and (c), of the Covenant, based on the argument that the State party has to a large extent already achieved realization of the rights enshrined in the aforementioned articles, whereas information received by the Committee reveals that full realization of those rights is not yet guaranteed.

600. This contravenes article 8, paragraph 2, of the Covenant (to which the State party has made a reservation), and ILO Convention No. 87 (1948) concerning freedom of association and protection of the right to organize, despite the existence of alternative systems of personnel committees.

613. The Committee urges the State party to consider the withdrawal of its reservations to articles 7 (d), 8, paragraph 2, and article 13, paragraph 2 (b) and (c) of the Covenant (E/2002/22 (2001)).

Mexico

385. The Committee also regrets the absence of plans to withdraw the State party's reservation to article 8 of the Covenant, although the right to form trade unions and the right to strike are enshrined in the Mexican Constitution and in the corresponding regulatory laws.

401. The Committee calls upon the State party to comply with its obligations under article 8 of the Covenant and to withdraw its reservation made under that article (E/2000/22 (1999)).

Morocco

109. Other difficulties noted by the Committee relate to the contradiction between the obligations set forth under the Covenant and various provisions relating to the civil law status governed by the Code of Personal Status which is partly based on religious precepts and falls within the King's competence. The Committee considers that when a State has ratified the Covenant without making any reservations, it is obliged to comply with all of the provisions of the Covenant. It may therefore not invoke any reasons or circumstances to justify the non-application of one or more articles of the Covenant, except in accordance with the provisions of the Covenant and the principles of general international law (E/1995/22 (1994)).

Netherlands May 1998

174. The Committee welcomes the Government's intention to withdraw the reservation it entered in the Covenant concerning the right to strike.

225. The Committee encourages the Government to carry out its intention to withdraw its reservation to the Covenant concerning the right to strike (E/1999/22 (1998)).

New Zealand

181. The Committee also notes the statement made by the State party that it intends to withdraw its reservation under article 10, paragraph 2, of the Covenant.

198. The Committee encourages the State party to ratify ILO Conventions Nos. 87 (1948), 117 (1962) and 118 (1962) and to withdraw its reservation to article 8 of the Covenant (E/2004/22 (2003)).

Sweden

728. The Committee takes note that the State party has maintained its reservation with regard to article 7 (d) of the Covenant concerning the right to remuneration for public holidays.

739. The Committee recommends that the State party withdraw its reservation to article 7 (d) of the Covenant (E/2002/22 (2001)).

Trinidad and Tobago

283. The Committee recommends that the State party ratify the ILO conventions relevant to economic, social and cultural rights and that it withdraw its reservation to article 8 of the Covenant. In addition, the Committee notes with interest the State party's declaration that it will reconsider its position regarding the denunciation of human rights instruments (E/2003/22 (2002)).

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland

212. The Committee also welcomes the delegation's statement that the State party is currently in the process of reviewing its reservations to international human rights instruments, with a view to withdrawing those that have been superseded by legislation or practice.

246. The Committee encourages the State party to withdraw its reservations to the Covenant that have become redundant (E/2003/22 (2002)).

Zimbabwe

67. The Committee welcomes the fact that Zimbabwe adhered to the Covenant without any reservations (E/1998/22 (1997)).

D. Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women

Positive remarks

On twenty-four occasions, the Committee commended, welcomed or expressed its appreciation to a State party for ratifying the Convention without reservations (Burundi, Kazakhstan, Uzbekistan, Myanmar, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Cameroon, Moldova, Lithuania, Kyrgyzstan, Azerbaijan, Croatia, Zimbabwe, Czech Republic, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, Antigua and Barbuda, Armenia, Namibia, Ethiopia, Bolivia, Chile, Uganda, Peru, Norway, Guyana).

On six occasions the Committee:

- commended/noted with appreciation fact of ratification of the Convention without reservations (Guatemala, Kenya, Guyana, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Sweden).

On three occasions the Committee:

- commended a State party for withdrawing its reservation/s (Fiji, Jamaica, Liechtenstein);
- commended a State party for placing objections to those reservations that are incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention (Finland, Netherlands, Sweden).

On two occasions the Committee:

- welcomed the commitment/intention to withdraw reservations (Turkey, Belgium);
- particularly commended efforts to withdraw certain reservations/expresses great satisfaction with the withdrawal of reservations (Thailand, Mauritius).

On one occasion the Committee:

- commended a State party for announcing its intention to withdraw a reservation (Austria);
- welcomed the imminent withdrawal of a reservation. At same time appeals to State party to make efforts to withdraw other reservation. (Austria);
- welcomed the willingness of a State party to review its reservations (Algeria);
- welcomed information on new legislation that will allow for withdrawal of a State party's reservations (Turkey);
- commended the Government for withdrawing some of its reservations and encourages it to continue its efforts to withdraw the remaining reservations (Thailand);
- commended the State party for ratifying the Convention without reservation demonstrated the Government's commitment to achieving equality for women in public and private life (Barbados).

Neutral remarks

On one occasion the Committee:

- appealed to the Government to make efforts to withdraw a reservation (Austria);
- noted that a State party intends to evaluate its reservation (Germany);

- noted that a State party committed itself to withdrawing certain articles of the Convention (Turkey);
- noted the fact that a Government intended to uphold its reservation concerning article 29 (Cuba).

Critical remarks

On six occasions the Committee:

- noted that the reservations to particular articles impede full implementation/are obstacles to the Convention's full implementation/seriously hinder implementation/are serious impediments to the full implementation (Singapore, Algeria, Morocco, Turkey, Luxembourg, Australia);
- expressed its concern with/noted with concern the reservations entered into by the State party (Maldives, Jordan, Cyprus, Tunisia, Australia, Bangladesh).

On three occasions the Committee:

- considered reservations to certain articles to be contrary to the object and purpose of the Convention and should be reviewed modified and/ withdrawn (Morocco, Iraq, Egypt).
- urged a State party to withdraw its reservations and to repeal/revoke legislation (Maldives, Jordan, Tunisia).

On two occasions the Committee:

- noted with concern the number and/ importance of reservations entered into by a State party (China, Morocco);
- noted its particular concern with respect to certain reservations (China, Morocco);
- reiterated its concern at/with the continued existence of the reservations of the State party (Algeria, Thailand);
- urged the State party to expedite the steps necessary for withdrawal of its reservations (Algeria, Egypt).

On one occasion the Committee:

- urged a State party to continue its efforts to withdraw its reservations (Australia);
- expressed its concern with the reservations and encouraged withdrawal (Republic of Korea);

- suggested that the Government review its reservations with the intention of withdrawing them, particularly that entered to paid maternity leave. It found it difficult to understand why paid maternity leave had not been implemented in working life (New Zealand);
- expressed its concern that a State party explicitly ruled out the possibility of withdrawal of its reservations, as well as its concern that the justification of those reservations was based on a desire to ensure consistency with Islamic Sharia (Iraq);
- strongly suggested the introduction of steps towards the removal of its reservations and requested the Government to keep it informed of developments (Luxembourg);
- urged a State party to review and re-examine regularly its reservations and amend laws that are incompatible with the Convention (China);
- noted with regret that a State party did not envisage withdrawing any of its reservations (Morocco);
- expressed its concern that the combination of reservations to certain articles left no room for evolving concepts of Islamic law (Morocco);
- was deeply concerned at a State party's reservations (Turkey);
- considered that the State party's reservations impeded full implementation of the Convention. It expressed deep concern regarding the reservations. It clarified the fact that articles 2 and 16 are the very essence of obligations under the Convention. It urged the State party to continue its process of reform in consultation with members of different ethnic and religious groups, including women. It recommended that the State party study reforms in other countries with similar legal traditions with a view to reviewing and reforming personal laws so that they conform with the Convention, and withdrawing these reservations. It urged the State party to further amend its legislation and to withdraw its reservations (Singapore);
- noted its particular concern with the language of a declaration of a State party which seemed to close the door on any future revisions of national legislation, and expressed the hope that the reservations and declarations would be withdrawn in the near future (Tunisia);
- regretted that a State party maintained its reservations (Israel);
- while appreciating efforts to withdraw its reservations, expressed its concern that these reservations have been retained (Egypt);
- while noted with appreciation that Yemen had not made any substantial reservations to the Convention, asked whether the Government could consider withdrawing its reservation (Yemen);

- while congratulating Ecuador on having ratified the Convention without any reservation, noted that not all legislation had been brought into line with the Convention (Ecuador);
- expressed concern that notwithstanding a State party's stated commitment to do so no further progress has been made in withdrawing its reservations. It expressed its concern at the lack of governmental commitment to working towards a situation that would allow for withdrawal. It urged the Government to take action to make the necessary Constitutional amendments and aware-ness raising to enable withdrawal (Luxembourg);
- urged the State party to review its reservations (Jordan);
- expressed the hope that a Government would progressively withdraw its reservations (Morocco);
- expressed concern at the State party's declaration of a general reservation on ratifying the Convention and considered it to be incompatible with the Convention's purpose and objective. It recommended that the State party take all the necessary measures to reconsider the general reservation entered on its ratification of the Convention (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya);
- expressed concern at the resistance to the legal reform necessary for the purposes of withdrawal (Turkey);
- found it difficult to understand why greater efforts had not been made to address certain reservations (Luxembourg);
- while commending the political determination of Iraq to improve the status of women in the process of modernization, questioned how progress could be achieved if the reservations to the Convention were maintained (Iraq).

Miscellaneous

CEDAW has adopted two General Recommendations on Reservations, in 1987 (General Comment 4), and 1992, the latter in the context of the World Conference on Human Rights in 1993 (General Comment 20). It also considers reservations in its General Comments on articles 7 and 8 (General Comment 23 (1997)) and articles 9, 15 and 16 (General Comment 21 (1994)).

On 25 March 1986, States parties to the Convention had an exchange of views on the question of reservations, and adopted a decision in which they urged full respect for the article 28, paragraph 2, of the Convention and requested the Secretary-General to seek the views of States parties on the question of reservations to the Convention that could be considered within the scope of article 28, paragraph 2, and to include those views in the report on the status of the Convention to the General Assembly at its forty-first session. Of the 87 States parties at the time, 17 replied (A/41/608). This report was considered at the forty-first session of the General Assembly, in which a number of States expressed their concern about the reservations made, and suggests were made that States do not fully understand the nature of the obligations contained in the Convention (A/C.3/41/SR.24, A/C.3/41/SR.25, A/C.3/41/SR.27, A/C.3/41/SR.29, A/C.3/41/SR.30)

In its Annual Reports, under the section “Matters Brought to the Attention of States Parties”, the Committee considered the issue of reservations on numerous occasions, in particular in the context of the World Conference on Human Rights (1993) (A/48/38), and in response to the request by the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities of the Commission on Human Rights to seek its views on the desirability of obtaining an advisory opinion on the validity and legal effect of reservations to the Convention. It decided, inter alia, that it should support the steps taken in common with other treaty bodies to seek such an opinion (A/48/38). On several occasions under this section, the Committee has expressed its concern over reservations (A/49/38) and has amended its guidelines for the preparation of initial and subsequent periodic reports to include a section indicating how the Committee would like States parties to report on their reservations (A/57/38, Part 2).

In its ‘Contribution to International Conferences,’ the Committee has considered reservations, inter alia, with respect to the Fourth World Conference on Women (A/49/38) and included in this section its statement on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women on the occasion of the 10-year review and appraisal of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, in which it expressed its continuing concern about the significant number of reservations to the Convention, many of which are broad-based and must be considered to be incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention. It also congratulated all those States that have withdrawn or modified their reservations to the Convention since the Fourth World Conference on Women, as called for in the Platform for Action, and urged all those States that continue to maintain reservations to work towards their withdrawal.” (A/60/38) Under the section “Action taken by the Committee under agenda item 7”, the Committee set out its contribution to the preparatory process for the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, in which it called for, inter alia, the revision of the substantive reservations to the Convention with the aim of their possible withdrawal (A/56/38).

In its Annual Report A/50/38, the Committee decided that it would examine reservations made by particular States parties in terms of whether the State party has made the same reservations in relation to other conventions. In its Annual Report A/53/48, the CEDAW included a statement on reservations which it wished to bring to the attention of States parties as its contribution to the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Reports were prepared by the Secretariat at the request of the Committee on the issue of reservations. In connection with its consideration of ways and means of expediting the work of the Committee, at its fifteenth session held in January 1996, the Committee was provided with information on reservations, inter alia, a review of “what United Nations conferences have said about reservations to the Convention” and “of comments made by women human rights non-governmental organizations concerning reservations” (CEDAW/C/1997/4). At its twenty-fourth session, held between 15 January and 2 February 2001, the Committee was provided with a report on its concluding comments on the reports of States parties to the Convention and on the practices of other human rights treaty bodies on reservations to human rights treaties (CEDAW/C/2001/II/4).

Algeria

The Committee also notes that the reservations of the State party to articles 2, 9, paragraph 2, 15, paragraph 4, and 16 are obstacles to the Convention's full implementation.

The Committee reiterates its concern at the reservations to the Convention entered by the State party.

The Committee urges the State party to expedite the steps necessary for withdrawal of its reservations.

The Committee welcomes the willingness of the Government of Algeria to review reservations to the Convention in the light of the evolution of Algerian society (A/54/38/Rev.1).

Antigua and Barbuda

The Committee welcomed the fact that Antigua and Barbuda had ratified the Convention without reservations (A/52/38/Rev.1).

Armenia

The Committee welcomed the presentation by the Government of Armenia and commended it on its ratification of the Convention without reservations so soon after independence in 1991 and on the timely submission of the initial report, which contained detailed information about the implementation of the Convention in accordance with the Committee's guidelines. It expressed its appreciation of the willingness of the representatives of Armenia to engage in an open, candid constructive dialogue with the Committee (A/52/38/Rev.1).

Australia

The Committee noted that the changing role of government in terms of public expenditure and the ongoing decentralization of responsibility in a number of areas, including health, from the federal to territorial or state Governments, had had an impact on the legal and practical implementation of the Convention. Australia continued to have two reservations to the Convention, one with regard to paid maternity leave and one with regard to "combat-related" employment in the armed forces, which constituted an obstacle to the full implementation of the Convention.

The Committee noted with concern that new legislation on industrial relations providing for the negotiation of individual contracts between employer and employee might have a disproportionately negative impact on women. Part-time and casual workers, of whom women formed a disproportionate share, were usually in a weaker position than other workers to negotiate favourable working agreements, in particular with regard to benefits. The reservation to the Convention with regard to paid maternity leave, and Australia's non-ratification of ILO Convention No. 103 concerning maternity protection, remained a concern for women workers with family responsibilities (A/52/38/Rev.1).

The Committee also decided on an exceptional basis that it would complete the concluding comments that had been deferred from its thirteenth session to its fourteenth session (A/49/38).

The Committee, however, expresses its concern about reservations which the Government made when ratifying the Convention. Although there have been some developments in this area, the Committee is particularly concerned about the reservations on paid maternity leave. The Committee urges the Government to continue its efforts to withdraw its reservations (A/50/38).

Austria

The Committee commends the Government for announcing its intention to accept the amendment to article 20, paragraph 1, of the Convention in respect of the time of meetings of the Committee. It also welcomes the imminent withdrawal of the reservation to article 7 of the Convention in respect of women and the military. At the same time, it appeals to the Government to make efforts also to withdraw the reservation to article 11 of the Convention in respect of night work (A/55/38).

Azerbaijan

The Committee expresses its appreciation to the Government of Azerbaijan for ratifying the Convention without reservations after the proclamation of its independence (A/53/38/Rev.1).

Bangladesh

Members of the Committee expressed their concern over the reservations made on article 2, article 13 (a) and article 16, paragraph 1 (c) and (f), of the Convention (A/48/38).

Barbados

That Barbados had ratified the Convention without reservation demonstrated the Government's commitment to achieving equality for women in public and private life (Combined second and third periodic reports, A/49/38).

Belgium

The Committee welcomed with appreciation Belgium's intention to withdraw its reservations to article 7, section (b), with respect to royal functions, and on article 15, with respect to matrimonial property of rural women (A/51/38).

Bolivia

.... [Members] commended the fact that Bolivia had ratified the Convention without entering reservations (A/50/38).

Burundi

The Committee commends the Government of Burundi for ratifying the Convention without reservations in 1991 (A/56/38).

Cameroon

The Committee commends the Government of Cameroon for ratifying the Convention without reservation (A/55/38).

Cyprus

The Committee noted with concern the reservation of the Government as to the exclusion of women from the military (A/51/38).

Chile

.... They noted with satisfaction that Chile had ratified the Convention without reservations (A/50/38).

China

The Committee notes with concern that China has entered seven reservations and declarations in respect of the provisions of the Convention as applied to Hong Kong. Of particular concern is the reservation exempting "the affairs of religious denominations or orders" from the scope of the Convention.

The Committee encourages the Government to review regularly the reservations entered to the Convention. It urges the Government to amend all laws that are incompatible with the Convention, including those relating to immigration and to pension schemes, with a view to removing the relevant reservations. In particular, it encourages the Government to eliminate discrimination against indigenous women following its review of the small house policy. The Committee also encourages the Government to re-examine the reservation relating to the favourable treatment of women in respect of labour law protection of pregnancy and maternity, which might well be in accordance with articles 4, paragraph 1, and 11, paragraph 2, of the Convention, as well as that regarding religious denominations (A/54/38/Rev.1).

Croatia

The Committee congratulates the Government of Croatia for ratifying the Convention without reservations and notes with satisfaction that the country's initial report followed the guidelines and presents comprehensive data on the situation of women in Croatia (A/53/38/Rev.1).

Cuba

The Committee noted the fact that the Government intended to uphold its reservation concerning article 29. The Committee was concerned about the elimination of certain areas of progress for women owing to the embargo and the subsequent economic constraints (A/51/38).

Czech Republic

The Committee congratulates the Government for ratifying the Convention without reservations (A/54/38/Rev.1).

Democratic Republic of the Congo

The Committee expresses its appreciation to the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo for ratifying the Convention in 1985 without reservations (A/55/38).

Ecuador

While congratulating Ecuador on having ratified the Convention on 9 November 1981 without any reservation, the experts of the Committee noted that not all legislation had been brought into line with the Convention (A/49/38).

Ethiopia

.... The Committee also appreciated the fact that Ethiopia had ratified the Convention as well as several other international human rights instruments and had accepted the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action without reservation (A/51/38).

Egypt

While appreciating the efforts of the National Council for Women to encourage the Government to withdraw its reservations to articles 2 and 9, paragraph 2, and article 16 of the Convention, the Committee expresses its concern that these reservations entered by the State party upon ratification have been retained.

The Committee urges the State party to expedite the steps necessary for the withdrawal of its reservations and in that regard draws its attention to the Committee's statement on reservations in its report on its nineteenth session⁸ and, in particular, its view that articles 2 and 16 are central to the object and purpose of the Convention and that, in accordance with article 28, paragraph 2, they should be withdrawn (A/56/38).

Finland

The Committee also commends the Government for placing objections to those reservations that are incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention (A/56/38).

Germany

The Committee notes that the Government, in assessing the implication of a decision of the European Court of Justice concerning the role of women in the German armed forces, will evaluate its reservation to article 7, subparagraph b, of the Convention (A/55/38).

Guyana

[Members] recalled that Guyana had demonstrated a long commitment to the Convention and was among the first Member States to sign and ratify the Convention without reservation.

The Committee commended the Government of Guyana for ratifying the Convention without reservation (A/50/38).

Guatemala

The Committee commended the Government of Guatemala for having ratified the Convention without reservations (A/49/38).

Iraq

The Committee is concerned that the State party explicitly ruled out the possibility of withdrawal of its reservations to article 2, subparagraphs (f) and (g), and articles 9 and 16. The Committee expresses its concern at the State party's justification of those reservations as being based on its desire to apply the provisions of the Convention in a manner consistent with Islamic Sharia. In that regard, the Committee draws the attention of the State party to its statement on reservations (see A/53/38/Rev.1, part two, chap. I), and in particular its view that articles 2 and 16 are central to the object and purpose of the Convention, and that, in accordance with article 28, paragraph 2, reservations should be reviewed and modified or withdrawn.

The Committee is also concerned that Iraq's nationality law, which is based on the principle that the members of a family should all have the same nationality and that none should have dual nationality or lose their nationality, does not grant women an independent right to acquire, change or retain their nationality or to pass it on to their children.

The Committee recommends that the Government of Iraq review its reservations to article 2, subparagraphs (f) and (g), and articles 9 and 16, in the light of the Committee's statement on reservations, assess the justifications for those reservations and modify or withdraw them as soon as possible to ensure full implementation of the Convention (A/55/38).

Members commended the political determination of Iraq to improve the status of women in the process of modernization; however, they questioned how progress could be achieved if the reservations to the Convention were maintained (A/48/38).

Israel

The Committee regretted the fact that Israel had maintained its reservations to articles 7 (b) and 16 of the Convention. It also regretted the fact that women could not become religious judges and that the religious laws that to a considerable degree govern family relations discriminated against women.

The Committee regretted the fact that Israel had maintained its reservations to articles 7 (b) and 16 of the Convention. It also regretted the fact that women could not become religious judges and that the religious laws that to a considerable degree govern family relations discriminated against women (A/52/38/Rev.1).

Jamaica

The Committee expresses its appreciation for the withdrawal of the reservation to article 9, paragraph 2, of the Convention, which the Government had made upon ratification (A/56/38).

Jordan

The Committee is concerned that Jordanian nationality law prevents a Jordanian woman from passing on her nationality to her children if her husband is not Jordanian. This is an anachronistic situation at a time when Jordan is making major strides in its economic and democratic development and when marriage between persons of different nationalities is increasingly common. It also notes with concern that Jordanian law prohibits women from concluding contracts in their own name, from travelling alone and from choosing their place of residence. It considers these limitations on the rights of women to be inconsistent with the legal status of women under the Jordanian Constitution and the Convention. The Committee notes with concern that Jordan has entered reservations to articles 9, paragraph 2, and 15, paragraph 4, which relate to these matters.

The Committee calls on the State party to revoke those laws and to withdraw its reservations to articles 9, paragraph 2, and 15, paragraph 4.

The Committee notes that a woman's right to choose a family name, a profession or an occupation and a woman's rights upon divorce and rights and responsibilities as a parent are not recognized in the Personal Status Code. It also notes with concern that Jordanian law recognizes the practice of polygamy.

The Committee calls upon the Government to amend the Personal Status Code to recognize women's rights to choice of family name and occupation, as well as their rights upon divorce and with regard to their responsibilities as parents. The Committee calls upon the Government to reconsider the law and policy on polygamy with a view to eliminating this practice in line with the Convention, the Constitution and evolving social relations in the country. It also recommends that the Government review its reservations to article 16, paragraph 1 (c), (d) and (g), with a view to their withdrawal (A/55/38).

Kazakhstan

The Committee welcomes the fact that Kazakhstan has ratified the Convention without reservations and has signed the Optional Protocol, and intends to ratify it as soon as possible (A/56/38).

Kenya

..... the Committee expressed its appreciation of the fact that Kenya had ratified the Convention without reservations (A/48/38).

Kyrgyzstan

The Committee commends Kyrgyzstan for ratifying a large number of international human rights treaties, including the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, which was ratified, without reservations, during a difficult time of transition to a market economy and of rapid social and political change (A/54/38/Rev.1)

Libyan Arab Jamahiriya

The Committee was concerned by the State party's declaration of a general reservation on ratifying the Convention and considered it to be incompatible with the Convention's purpose and objective.

The Committee recommended that the State party take all the necessary measures to reconsider the general reservation entered on its ratification of the Convention (A/49/38).

Liechtenstein

The Committee welcomes the Government's withdrawal of its reservation to the Convention (A/54/38/Rev.1).

Lithuania

The Committee welcomes the fact that Lithuania has ratified the Convention without reservations, and that it intends to sign the Optional Protocol and to accept article 20, paragraph 1, of the Convention concerning the time of meetings of the Committee (A/55/38).

Luxembourg

The Committee noted that the reservations made by the State party to articles 7 and 16 (g) impeded the full implementation of the provisions of the Convention. Although there had been attempts to remove the reservation to article 7, the Committee found it difficult to understand why greater efforts had not been made to address the reservation to article 16 (g).

The Committee strongly suggested the introduction of steps towards the removal of the reservations to articles 7 and 16 (g) as promised in the oral presentation of the representative of the Government. The Committee encouraged the Ministry for the Advancement of Women in its efforts to that end and requested the Government to keep it informed of developments on the matter (A/52/38/Rev.1).

Luxembourg

The Committee is concerned that, notwithstanding the Government's stated commitment in its action plan 2000 to the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and the Platform for Action, no further progress has been made in withdrawing the reservations concerning articles 7 (hereditary transmission of the crown to the oldest male) and 16, paragraph 7 (g) (right to choose the family name of children). With regard to the latter, the Committee expresses its concern at the lack of governmental commitment to working towards influencing cultural traditions and attitudes which would allow for a withdrawal of the reservation.

The Committee urges the Government to take action towards the amendment of article 3 of the Constitution in view of the consent of the Grand Duke to such an amendment. The Committee also calls on the Government to undertake awareness-raising and education campaigns to overcome traditional and stereotypical images of women and men so as to enable it to withdraw its reservation under article 16 (A/55/38).

Mauritius

The positive move on the part of the Mauritius Government in withdrawing its reservations on articles 11.1 (b), 11.1 (d) and 16.1 (g) was highly appreciated by the Committee.

Several experts expressed great satisfaction with the withdrawal of reservations to articles 11.1 (b), 11.1 (d) and 16.1 (g) of the Convention. One expert pointed out that Mauritius was one of those rare countries where the Convention itself was being used to reform the domestic legal and economic systems so as to achieve greater compliance (A/50/38).

Maldives

The Committee expresses its concern with the reservations entered by the State party to articles 7 (a) and 16 of the Convention. It is concerned that the reservation to article 7 (a) on political participation supports the retention of legislative provisions that exclude women from the office of President and Vice-President of the country.

The Committee urges the Government to withdraw these reservations and to repeal legislation limiting women's political participation in public life (A/56/38).

Morocco

The Committee was of the view that, although the instrument of ratification of the Convention by the Kingdom of Morocco was in itself an important event, the fact that it had been accompanied by declarations and reservations concerning the substance of the Convention seriously hindered the latter's implementation.

The Committee was deeply concerned at the number and importance of the reservations made by Morocco, particularly the reservation to article 2, one of the Convention's central articles. The Committee considers any reservation to that article to be contrary to the object and purpose of the Convention and incompatible with international law. The Committee was likewise concerned that the combination of reservations to articles 2 and 15 leave no room for evolving concepts of Islamic law.

The Committee noted with regret that the State party did not envisage withdrawing any of its reservations.

The Committee expressed the hope that the Government would envisage, through the political will of its leaders, the progressive withdrawal of the many reservations that were seriously undermining the proper implementation of the Convention (A/52/38/Rev.1).

Moldova

The Committee welcomes the fact that the Republic of Moldova adopted the Convention without reservations (A/55/38).

Myanmar

The Committee welcomes the fact that Myanmar ratified the Convention without reservations on substantive articles (A/55/38).

Namibia

The Committee commended the Government of Namibia for ratifying the Convention without reservations so soon after its successful and long struggle for independence (A/52/38/Rev.1).

Netherlands

The Committee commends the Government for its willingness to place objections to reservations entered by other States parties that it considers incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention (A/56/38).

[Members] welcomed the fact that the Convention had led to revisions of and additions to existing legislation and that it had been ratified without reservations.

The Committee commended the State party for not entering any reservations and for undertaking such conscientious efforts in legislation as well as other measures, first before ratifying the Convention, and secondly for its implementation (A/49/38).

New Zealand

The Committee suggested that the Government review its reservations with the intention of withdrawing them, particularly that entered to paid maternity leave. The Committee found it difficult to understand why paid maternity leave had not been implemented in working life (A/49/38).

Nicaragua

Members commended Nicaragua for the fact that it had ratified the Convention without entering any reservations (A/48/38).

Norway

[Members] welcomed the fact that the Convention had been ratified early without reservations (A/50/38).

Peru

The members of the Committee welcomed the fact that Peru had ratified the Convention without any reservations (A/50/38).

Republic of Korea

The Committee also expressed its concern about the reservations to the Convention made by the Government of the Republic of Korea, and hoped that it would consider withdrawing those reservations (A/48/38).

Republic of the Fiji Islands

.... The Committee commends the State party for withdrawing its reservations to articles 5 (a) and 9 of the Convention. It also welcomes the extensive programme of law reforms in critical areas in conformity with the Constitution and the Convention and commends in particular the enactment of a citizenship law based on article 9 of the Convention (A/57/38 (Part 1)).

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

The Committee expressed appreciation for the frank presentation of the combined initial, second and third reports. The oral presentation complemented the comprehensive written reports. The Government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines was commended for being one of the first countries that had ratified the Convention, and had done so without reservation (A/52/38/Rev.1).

Singapore

The Committee considers that the State party's reservations impede full implementation of the Convention.

The Committee expresses deep concern regarding the reservations made by the Government of Singapore to articles 2, 9, 11, paragraph 1, and 16 of the Convention.

Recognizing that the pluralistic nature of Singapore society and its history call for sensitivity to the cultural and religious values of different communities, the Committee nevertheless wishes to clarify the fact that articles 2 and 16 are the very essence of obligations under the Convention. Since some reforms have already been introduced in Muslim personal law, the Committee urges the State party to continue this process of reform in consultation with members of different ethnic and religious groups, including women. It recommends that the State party study reforms in other countries with similar legal traditions with a view to reviewing and reforming personal laws so that they conform with the Convention, and withdrawing these reservations.

The Committee urges the State party to further amend the nationality law so as to eliminate discrimination against women, and withdraw its reservation to article 9. The explanation that a Singaporean woman cannot transfer nationality to her child when she marries a foreigner and the child is born overseas, since dual nationality is not recognized, is unconvincing. The Committee wishes to point out that since both mother and father can transfer nationality to children born within the country in many countries, including Singapore, the same problem can arise with respect to the children born of Singaporean men and foreign women.

The Committee recommends that persons in confidential, managerial and executive posts be brought within the coverage of the Employment Act. The Committee considers that the capacity for individual bargaining, and the existence of better working conditions in these sectors do not justify the absence of legal protection and the reservation to article 11.

The Committee expresses concern that the failure to extend the Employment Act to domestic workers results in discrimination against women domestic workers and denial of legal protection. It is also concerned that the requirement of their current employer's consent to transfer employment deters such workers from reporting grievances to governmental authorities.

The Committee urges the Government of Singapore to amend the Employment Act so that it covers these sectors and to withdraw its reservation to article 11 (A/56/38).

Sweden

Moreover, the fact that the Government had not made reservations to the Convention was noted with appreciation (A/48/38).

The Committee commends the Government for its willingness to place objections to reservations entered by other States parties that it considers incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention (A/56/38).

Thailand

The Committee commends the Government for withdrawing five reservations to the Convention, and encourages it to continue its effort to withdraw the two remaining reservations. It particularly commends efforts to withdraw the reservation to article 16 relating to family life and marriage.

The Committee is concerned with the continued existence of Thailand's reservation to article 16 of the Convention which relates to marriage and family life (A/54/38/Rev.1)

Tunisia

The Committee was concerned about the general declaration made at ratification in relation to reservations made to the Convention.

The Committee urges the Government to consider withdrawing its reservations (A/50/38).

Turkey

At the Fourth World Conference on Women, Turkey committed itself to withdrawing all its reservations under articles 15 and 16 of the Convention by the year 2000, a step which requires the revision of a number of discriminatory laws contained in the Civil Code.

The reservations to articles 15 and 16 of the Convention were regarded by the experts as serious impediments to the full implementation of the Convention in the State party.

The Committee welcomed the information, reiterated in the excellent oral presentation of the delegation of the State party, relating to the draft law to amend the various articles of the Civil Code pertaining to family law, which would allow for the withdrawal by Turkey of its reservations.

The Committee also welcomed the commitments made by Turkey at the Fourth World Conference on Women to the effect that by the year 2000 it would:

(d) Withdraw the reservations to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.

Principal areas of concern

The Committee was deeply concerned about the reservations of Turkey to article 15, paragraphs 2 and 4, and article 16, paragraphs 1 (c), (d), (f) and (g). It was also concerned with the prolonged discussions and the resistance to the reform of the Civil Code, although it appreciated that efforts had been made in that context by the General Directorate, women members of Parliament and the Ministry of Justice. The Committee urged the State party to facilitate and hasten that process so that the Law on Citizenship, the Civil Code and the Criminal Code could be brought into conformity with the articles of the Convention.

The Committee invited the Government to review the Civil Code, particularly with regard to family law, with a view to removing the reservations to the Convention. It also suggested that the related provisions of the Penal Code be revised in order to ensure women the full protection of the law on equal terms with men (A/52/38).

Uganda

Members welcomed the fact that the Convention had been ratified without reservations (A/50/38).

Uzbekistan

The Committee welcomes the fact that Uzbekistan ratified the Convention without reservation and is considering signing its Optional Protocol (A/56/38).

Yemen

The Committee noted with appreciation that Yemen had not made any substantial reservations to the Convention. The only one that had been made concerned the system for the settlement of disputes, on which many other countries had made reservations. Nevertheless, members asked whether the Government could consider withdrawing its reservation (A/48/38).

Zimbabwe

The Committee congratulates the Government for ratifying the Convention without reservations (A/53/38/Rev.1).

E. Committee against Torture

Positive remarks

On one occasion the Committee:

- welcomed information that a State party has decided to withdraw its reservation to article 20 (Belarus).
- welcomed the withdrawal of the reservation to article 20 and the declarations of acceptance of the procedures under article 21 and 22 of the Convention (Russian Federation).
- appreciated the determination of a State party to accede without reservations (Denmark).
- stated that it was confident that the State party would make a declaration in favour of articles 21 and 22 and withdraw its reservation on article 20 (Czech Republic).

On two occasions the Committee:

- welcomed the accession to/ratification of the Convention without reservations (Bolivia, Brazil).
- welcomed the declarations recognising the competence of the Committee under articles 21 and 22 (Slovakia, Czech Republic).
- appreciated the determination of a State party to accede without reservations (Denmark, Liechtenstein).

On three occasions the Committee:

- welcomed/regarded particularly noteworthy that a State party has acceded to/ratified the Convention without reservation and has declared in favour of articles 21 and 22 (Algeria, Uruguay, Croatia).
- noted with satisfaction a State party's withdrawal of its reservation to article 20 (Zambia, Slovakia, Czech Republic).

Neutral remarks

On one occasion the Committee:

- stated that a State party has made the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 (Venezuela).
- stated that a State party has ratified the Convention without reservations (Poland).

- stated that a State party has made the declaration provided for in articles 21 or 22 and has not formulated any reservations or additional declarations (Morocco).
- stated that a State party has made a reservation to article 20 and 30 (Israel).
- stated that a State party has not expressed a reservation on article 20 of the Convention (Georgia).

On three occasions, the Committee stated that a State party has not made the declaration provided for in articles 21 or 22 (Brazil, Costa Rica, Israel).

Critical remarks

On one occasion the Committee:

- stated that the maintenance of the reservation to article 20 and the non-existence of the declarations under articles 21 and 22 considerably restrict the scope of the Convention (Morocco).
- recommended that a State party should withdraw its reservation to article 20 (Kuwait).
- expressed the hope that the State party would review a reservation to article 14 (New Zealand).

On two occasions, the Committee hoped that the State party will review its reservation and make the declarations concerning article 21 and 22 (Republic of Korea, Morocco).

On three occasions, the Committee stated that a State party should consider withdrawing/suggests that a State party withdraw its reservation to article 20 and declaring in favour of articles 21 and 22 (Ukraine, Israel, China).

Miscellaneous

In A/53/44, the CAT informed the ILC that the Committee had considered the Commission's preliminary conclusions during the November 1998 session, and that it shared the views expressed by the Human Rights Committee, which nit considers as consistent with the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, 1969.

Algeria

The Committee notes with satisfaction Algeria's commitment to institutionalize the rule of law and promote the protection of human rights as evidenced, inter alia, by its ratification of the Convention (without reservation and with declarations under articles 21 and 22 (A/52/44).

Argentina

Argentina ratified the Convention without reservation on 24 September 1986 and, on the same date, made the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 (A/53/44).

Belarus

The Committee welcomes the information presented by the representatives of the State party that the Government of Belarus has decided to withdraw its reservation to article 20 of the Convention regarding the inquiry procedure (A/56/44).

Bolivia

.... Bolivia acceded to the Convention on 12 April 1999 without making any reservations. It has not made the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 (A/56/44).

Brazil

Brazil ratified the Convention on 28 September 1989 without making any reservation. The State party has not made the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 (A/56/44).

Chile

.... The possibility of withdrawing the existing reservation to the Convention and making declarations to the effect that the State party recognizes the competence of the Committee in the circumstances described in articles 21 and 22 of the Convention (A/50/44).

China

The Committee recommends to the State party the following:

(h) China is invited to consider withdrawing its reservations to article 20 and declaring in favour of articles 21 and 22 of the Convention (A/51/44).

.... The Committee also called upon the Government to consider making declarations with regard to articles 21 and 22 of the Convention and withdrawing the reservation entered in respect of article 20 of the Convention (A/48/44).

Costa Rica

Costa Rica deposited its instrument of ratification of the Convention on 11 November 1993 without making any reservation. The State party has not made the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 of the Convention (A/56/44).

Croatia

It is particularly noteworthy that Croatia has not expressed reservation to article 20 and has declared in favour of articles 21 and 22 of the Convention (A/51/44).

Czech Republic

The Committee welcomes the declarations made on 3 September 1996 recognizing the competence of the Committee under articles 21 and 22 and the withdrawal of the reservation on article 20 (A/56/44).

.... Even though the Czech Republic has not declared in favour of articles 21 and 22 and maintains its reservation on article 20 of the Convention, the Czech delegation explained that this was due to the weight of business in the legislative and executive fields and in no way reflects a lack of political will to remedy the situation. The Committee is confident that the Czech Republic will move to reform its situation in this regard and looks forward to its second periodic report (A/50/44).

Denmark

The Committee appreciates the determination of Denmark to guarantee respect for and protection of human rights, being one of the first States to accede without reservations to most of the international and regional instruments for the protection of such rights. Thus Denmark is a forefront State in the development of human rights standards (A/51/44).

Georgia

Georgia is one of the States parties that have not expressed a reservation on article 20 of the Convention (A/52/44).

Hungary

The Committee notes with satisfaction that Hungary earlier this year withdrew its reservation on geographical limitation to the 1951 Geneva Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, that previously excluded non-European asylum seekers. The Committee also notes with satisfaction, inter alia, the new legislation on asylum; Act LIX 1997 on Criminal Punishment System; the Ombudsman mechanism and Hungary's compliance with the previous recommendations of the Committee (A/54/44).

Israel

.... Israel should consider withdrawing its reservation to article 20 and declaring in favour of articles 21 and 22 (A/57/44).

.... Upon ratification, Israel made a reservation in respect of articles 20 and 30. Israel has not declared in favour of articles 21 and 22. The second periodic report was due on 1 November 1996 and was received on 6 March 1998 (A/53/44).

Israel should consider making the declarations provided for under articles 21 and 22 and withdrawing its reservation to article 20 of the Convention (A/52/44).

Israel ratified the Convention on 3 October 1991 and made reservations on articles 20 and 30. It also did not make the declarations to accept the provisions of articles 21 and 22 of the Convention (A/49/44).

Kuwait

The Committee recommends that Kuwait consider withdrawing its reservations to the Committee's article 20 jurisdiction (A/53/44).

Liechtenstein

The Committee appreciates the determination of Liechtenstein to guarantee respect for and the promotion of human rights through its accession without reservations to a number of international and regional instruments for the promotion of such rights (A/50/44).

Morocco

The maintenance of the reservations expressed in respect of article 20 and the non-existence of the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 of the Convention; this considerably restricts the scope of the Convention in respect of Morocco.

The Committee, which appreciates Morocco's ratification of most of the human rights covenants and conventions, hopes that the Moroccan Government will withdraw the reservations entered with regard to article 20 and make the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 of the Convention (A/50/44).

New Zealand

.... The Committee during its discussions raised the issue of the State party's reservation to one of the core articles of the Convention, article 14, regarding compensation for victims of torture. The Committee expressed the hope that the New Zealand authorities would review that reservation to ensure its full compliance with the articles of the Convention (A/48/44).

Poland

.... Poland is one of the first Eastern European countries to bring about broad and far-reaching reforms in all areas - political, economic, social and legislative. It has ratified the European Convention on Human Rights and the Convention against Torture without reservations, as well as other international human rights instruments (A/49/44).

Republic of Korea

The Committee hopes that the Republic of Korea will review its reservation and make the declarations concerning articles 21 and 22 of the Convention (A/52/44).

Russian Federation

The withdrawal of the reservation to article 20 and the declarations of acceptance of the procedures under articles 21 and 22 of the Convention are welcomed (A/52/44).

Slovakia

The Committee welcomes the following:

(b) The declarations made on 17 March 1995 recognizing the competence of the Committee under articles 21 and 22 and the withdrawal of the reservation on article 20 made on 7 July 1988 by the Czechoslovak Socialist Republic (A/56/44).

Ukraine

The Committee recommends that the State party: ...

(b) Deposit with the Secretary-General its declaration accepting the Committee's competence with respect to articles 21 and 22 of the Convention and the removal of its reservation in regard to article 20 (A/57/44);

The Committee encourages the Government of Ukraine to consider withdrawing its reservation to article 20 of the Convention and to make the declarations under articles 21 and 22, as well as ratify Protocol No. 6 to the European Convention on Human Rights (A/52/44).

Uruguay

The members of the Committee welcome the presentation of the second periodic report by the delegation of Uruguay and note that Uruguay was one of the first countries to ratify the Convention, that it has not made any reservations and that it has recognized the optional procedures set forth in articles 20, 21 and 22 of the Convention (A/52/44).

Venezuela

It made the declarations provided for under articles 21 and 22 on 21 December 1993, and has not formulated any reservations or additional declarations (A/54/44).

Zambia

The Committee notes with satisfaction the following elements:

(a) The State party's withdrawal of its reservation made with respect to article 20 of the Convention (A/57/44).

F. Committee on the Rights of the Child

Positive remarks

On six occasions the Committee:

- welcomed the intention to withdraw its reservations or to consider withdrawal or to review (Indonesia, China, Mauritius, Poland, Croatia, Republic of Korea);
- welcomed withdrawal or noted with satisfaction the withdrawal of one or more reservations (Slovenia, Pakistan, United Kingdom, Tunisia, Norway, Myanmar).

On one occasion the Committee:

- welcomed the State party's ratification without reservations (Sudan);
- noted the commitment expressed by the delegation to encourage the State party to withdraw its reservations and recommended that all necessary measures be taken to facilitate the process at the earliest possible opportunity (Mali);

- welcomed preparation of legislation that will facilitate withdrawal of reservations and encourages the State party to complete the revision of its legislation (Liechtenstein);
- expressed its appreciation to a State party for having expressed concern to reservations made by a State party which are incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention (Norway);

Neutral remarks

On one occasion the Committee:

- stated that the State party maintains reservations affecting certain articles. It took note of the commitment of the State party to review its reservations, in light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (Austria);
- noted the State party's initiative, through its Standing Committee on Procedural, to initiate the process of review of its reservation and encourages the State party to complete the process (Denmark).

Critical remarks

On eighteen occasions, the Committee expressed its concern at particular reservations and recommended withdrawal or reiterated its recommendation to withdraw in light of the Vienna Declaration adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights (Germany, Japan, Singapore, Argentina, Switzerland, Netherlands, Japan, Maldives, Luxembourg, Iraq, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Liechtenstein, Turkey, Monaco, France, Holy See, Canada, Denmark). On two of these occasions, the Committee also requested or wished to be kept informed of developments (Canada, Denmark).

On seven occasions the Committee:

- regretted that the concerns and recommendations it had expressed with respect to reservations upon consideration of a State party's initial report were insufficiently addressed in subsequent report/s. In such cases, the Committee reiterated the invitation to withdraw the reservations and declarations (France, Canada, Bangladesh, Morocco, Republic of Korea, Czech Republic, Argentina);
- expressed its concern that the broad and/ imprecise nature of a reservation/general reservation potentially negated many of the Convention's provisions and raised concern as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention. It recommended withdrawal in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (Jordan, Djibouti, Saudi Arabia, New Zealand, Jordan, Tunisia, United Kingdom).

On five occasions, the Committee expressed its concern that a reservation raised questions about its compatibility with the principle and provisions of the Convention or might impede the full implementation of the Convention. It encouraged the State party to consider withdrawal (Slovenia, Australia, Indonesia, Pakistan, Republic of Korea). In one of these cases, the Committee stated that it would like to be kept informed of developments (Slovenia).

On three occasions, the Committee set out the negative implications of certain reservations and recommended withdrawal (Netherlands, Belgium, Malta).

On two occasions the Committee:

- observed that some of a State party's reservations were superfluous and recommended withdrawal (Jordan, Egypt);
- while acknowledging openness of the State party towards the possibility of reviewing its reservations, remained concerned that these reservations might impede the full implementation of the Convention. It encouraged the State party to further review its reservations with a view to their withdrawal (Bangladesh, Czech Republic);
- recommended that the State party expedite the process for the withdrawal of the reservations and declarations (Germany, New Zealand);
- noted the efforts made towards removal of reservations but regretted the slow process of this withdrawal (Canada, New Zealand);
- recommended that the State party engage in dialogue with certain groups to facilitate withdrawal (New Zealand, Germany).

On one occasion the Committee:

- expressed its concern/remained concerned at particular reservations and recommended withdrawal/reiterates its recommendation to withdraw and then described how the State party should reform its legislation to make withdrawal possible (Republic of Korea);
- expressed its concern that the broad nature of its reservations may cause misunderstandings about the nature of the State's commitment to implementing in the rights covered by these articles. It encouraged the State party to consider withdrawal and underlines that interpretative declarations by the State party might have the desired effect of clarifying the State position in respect of these particular rights (Syrian Arab Republic);
- expressed its deep concern that the broad and imprecise nature of a State party's reservation potentially negated many of the provisions and principles of the Convention as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention, as well as the overall implementation of the Convention. It strongly recommended that the State party expeditiously undertake the re-examination of its reservations with a view to reconsidering and ultimately withdrawing them, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights (1993). In this regard, the Committee considered that the State party should benefit from the recent withdrawal of a similar reservation by another State party. In addition, the Committee recommended that the State party study particular reservations with a view to withdrawing them (Brunei Darussalam);

- while noting that the State party had set up a governmental working group to study the compatibility of existing laws with the Convention, was nevertheless concerned that the broad and imprecise nature of the general reservation potentially negated many of the Convention's provisions and raised concern as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention (Iran);
- recommended to the State party to study its reservation with a view to narrowing it, taking into account the Human Rights Committee's General Comment 22 and eventual withdrawal (Jordan);
- noted with regret the State party's reservation but welcomed information that it would be withdrawn once the law was reviewed (Botswana);
- remained deeply concerned about certain reservations which might impede the full implementation of the Convention, but welcomed the information from the delegation that the State party was willing to continue to review those reservations with a view to their withdrawal. In light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (1993), the Committee reiterated its previous recommendation that the State party withdraw its reservations to the Convention and recommended that the State party take into account the experience of other States parties in this regard (Bangladesh);
- welcomed the State party's withdrawal of certain reservations and while noting that consideration would be given to withdrawing the remaining reservations, it remained concerned about the extent of reservations and declarations made to the Convention. In particular, it remained concerned that certain reservations appear to be incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention (Tunisia);
- regretted that no review been undertaken with respect to the reservations since the presentation of the initial report. In noting the State party's reasoning in its report, it reiterated its concern that the nature of the general reservation potentially negates many of the Convention's provisions and raises concern as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention. The Committee referred in particular to certain articles and highlights the unnecessary nature of certain reservations. It recommended that the State party, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action, and taking account of the Human Rights Committee's general comment No. 22, study its reservations, in particular certain provisions (Syrian Arab Republic);
- appreciated the fact that the State party had reviewed its declaration and/ reservation but was concerned that it does not intend to withdraw them. It encouraged the State party to review with a view to withdrawal (Belgium);
- regretted that the State party has not withdrawn its reservation, highlights the unnecessary nature of its reservation and requests withdrawal (Czech Republic);
- welcomed information that a reservation would be withdrawn, but expressed concern about the remaining reservations and emphasised that it was a long established in international law that States parties to a treaty could not invoke provisions of their domestic laws as justification for their inability to perform obligations under a treaty. It recommended that the State party withdraw some reservations and study others with a view to narrowing them (United Arab Emirates);

- welcomed information that the State party was re-examining its reservations to certain articles but was nevertheless concerned that its reservation to certain articles was not included in this re-examination. It recommended the State party to expeditiously re-examine its reservations with a view to withdrawal in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights (Oman);
- welcomed information that the State party was re-examining its reservation. It was concerned that the broad and imprecise nature of a State party's reservation potentially negated many of the provisions and principles of the Convention as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention, as well as the overall implementation of the Convention. It encouraged the State party to expeditiously complete its re-examination with a view to withdrawal in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights (Qatar);
- expressed its concern at certain reservations, welcomed information that consideration would be given to withdrawal of other reservations, but remained concerned at the slow pace and the fact that some reservations will not be withdrawn. The Committee then described in detail what changes should be made to domestic legislation to facilitate withdrawal (Switzerland);
- regretted that a State party had not considered reviewing its position and withdrawing its reservation (France);
- noted with appreciation the withdrawal of certain reservations, but expressed its concern at the remaining reservations. It noted the State party's ratification of the ICCPR drawing its attention to relevant provisions and encouraged the State party to consider the possibility of reviewing its reservations with a view to withdrawal in light of the ratification of this treaty as well as the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (Thailand);
- noted its concern that a State party's reservations to the Convention remained and encouraged the State party to withdraw them (Netherlands);
- expressed its concern at a reservation/s, which affected the implementation of the rights guaranteed in a particular provision/s, but welcomed the information that the State party would reconsider the need for this reservation (Morocco);
- urged the State party to review its position and consider withdrawing its reservation (France);
- recommended that the State party make withdrawal of all reservations a matter of priority (Indonesia);

- acknowledged the information that reservations and declarations made by a State party upon ratification had become unnecessary but remained concerned at the lack of willingness of a certain group to accept withdrawal (Germany).

Comments with respect to other treaties

On one occasion the Committee:

- was encouraged by the withdrawal of its reservations to article 20 of the CAT (Bahrain);
- recommended a State party to reconsider its reservation to a provision of the ICCPR (Netherlands).

Miscellaneous

The CRC has touched upon the issue of reservations in its General Comment on articles 4, 42 and 44-6 (General Comment 05 (2003)). In its Annual Report, A/49/41, under the heading “Conclusions and Recommendations adopted by the Committee on the Rights of the Child”, the CRC referred to the issue of reservations, and inter alia, recognized the importance of tackling the question of reservations and declarations in the course of its consideration of reports submitted by States parties.

To mark the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Convention on the Rights of the Child by the General Assembly, on 20 November 1999, the Committee during its twenty-second session, had a general discussion to assess the impact of the Convention and to elaborate recommendations to improve its implementation. One of the four themes related to reservations upon which the Committee came to certain conclusions, inter alia, that the Committee had a decisive role to play in the assessment of the validity and impact of reservations made by States parties, and will continue to systematically raise this issue with States parties. It asked that a study be carried out on existing reservations, and seemed open to “alternative approaches” it could adopt (A/55/41).

In its Annual Report A/57/41, under “Overview of the other activities of the Committee” the Committee highlighted its concern for the nature of the reservations made by States parties, particularly those of a general nature, because they serve to restrict the application of the Convention. It stated that it had recommended to States that, at the very least, they study their reservations or narrow them, with a view to eventual withdrawal. However, it noted that only one State party has done so during the period under consideration, the Committee is encouraged by some States having indicated their willingness to study and reconsider their reservations.

In its guidelines on reporting the Committee provides the States parties with specific guidelines on reporting on reservations and declarations.

Argentina

The Committee is furthermore concerned about the reservations entered by the Government of Argentina upon the ratification of the Convention with respect to article 21 (b) to (e) owing to their broad nature.

The Committee recommends that the Government of Argentina consider reviewing the reservation entered upon ratification of the Convention with a view to withdrawing it. In that connection, the attention of the State party is drawn to the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights in June 1993, which encouraged States to withdraw reservations to the Convention (CRC/C/29).

The Committee regrets that most of the concerns and recommendations (ibid.) it made upon consideration of the State party's initial report (CRC/C/8/Add.2 and 17) have been insufficiently addressed, particularly those contained in paragraphs 14 (reservations) The Committee notes that those concerns and recommendations are reiterated in the present document.

The Committee urges the State party to make every effort to address those recommendations in the concluding observations of the initial report that have not yet been implemented and to address the list of concerns contained in the present concluding observations.

The Committee reiterates its concern about the reservations (ibid., para. 8) entered by the Government of Argentina upon ratification of the Convention with respect to article 21 (b), (c), (d) and (e).

The Committee reiterates its recommendation (ibid., para. 14) that the State party consider reviewing the reservations entered upon ratification of the Convention with a view to withdrawing them (CRC/C/121).

Australia

The Committee notes with concern the reservation made by the State party to article 37 (c) of the Convention. The Committee notes that this reservation might impede the full implementation of the Convention.

In the light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of 1993, the Committee encourages the State party to review its reservation to article 37 (c) with a view to its withdrawal. The Committee emphasizes that article 37 (c) allows for exemptions from the need to separate children deprived of their liberty from adults when that is in the best interests of the child (A/53/41).

Austria

The State party maintains two reservations affecting articles 13 and 15, and article 17 of the Convention. The Committee takes note of the commitment of the State party to review its reservations, in light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of 1993, with a view to their withdrawal (A/55/41).

Bahrain

The Committee is encouraged by the efforts made by the State party towards greater openness and accountability with respect to human rights, including the withdrawal of its reservation to article 20 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CRC/C/114).

Bangladesh

The Committee regrets that some of the concerns it expressed and the recommendations it made (CRC/C/15/Add.74) after its consideration of the State party's initial report (CRC/C/3/Add.38), particularly those contained in paragraphs 28-47, regarding the withdrawal of the reservations (para. 28). Those concerns and recommendations are reiterated in the present document.

The Committee urges the State party to implement the previous recommendations that have not yet been implemented, as well as the recommendations contained in the present concluding observations.

The Committee remains deeply concerned about the reservations to articles 14, paragraphs 1 and 21 of the Convention, which might impede the full implementation of the Convention, but welcomes the information from the delegation that the State party is willing to continue to review those reservations with a view to their withdrawal. In light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (1993), the Committee reiterates its previous recommendation that the State party withdraw its reservations to the Convention (art. 14, paras. 1 and 21) and recommends that the State party take into account the experience of other States parties in this regard (CRC/C/133).

While acknowledging the openness of the State party towards the possibility of reviewing its reservations to articles 14, paragraph 1, and 21 of the Convention, the Committee remains concerned that these reservations might impede the full implementation of the Convention.

In the light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, the Committee encourages the State party to further review its reservations to articles 14, paragraph 1, and 21 of the Convention, with a view to their withdrawal. The Committee is of the opinion that, in the light of the proposed reforms to national legislation, the reservations may not be necessary (A/53/41).

Belgium

The Committee appreciates the fact that the State party has reviewed its declaration on article 2 and its reservation to article 40.2 (v) of the Convention, pursuant to the previous concluding observations. Nevertheless, it is concerned that the State party does not intend to withdraw them. With respect to article 2, the Committee, noting that the general principle of non-discrimination in the Convention prohibits differences in treatment on grounds that are arbitrary and objectively unjustifiable, including nationality, is concerned that the declaration on article 2 may restrict the enjoyment of non-Belgian children in Belgium of rights contained in the Convention. The Committee emphasizes that the guarantee of non-discrimination in the Convention applies to “each child within [the State party’s] jurisdiction”. With respect to the reservation to article 40, the Committee is concerned that the possibility of appeal to the Court of Cassation against judgements and measures imposed by the Court of Assizes (sitting here as the court of first and last instance) is strictly limited to points of law and therefore deprives the defendant of a full review of his case by a higher court, which is all the more important in that the Court of Assizes handles the most severe cases and imposes relatively heavy sentences.

The Committee encourages the State party to review its declaration and reservation with a view to withdrawing them in accordance with the Declaration and Programme of Action of the Vienna World Conference on Human Rights (1993) (CRC/C/118).

Botswana

The Committee notes with regret the reservation that the State party has made to article 1 of the Convention, but welcomes the information during the dialogue that the reservation will be withdrawn as soon as the review of the law is completed.

The Committee recommends that the State party withdraw its reservation to article 1 of the Convention at the earliest time possible by expediting the law review process (CRC/C/143).

Brunei Darussalam

The Committee is deeply concerned that the broad and imprecise nature of the State party’s general reservation potentially negates many of the provisions and principles of the Convention as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention, as well as the overall implementation of the Convention.

The Committee strongly recommends that the State party expeditiously undertake the re-examination of its reservations with a view to reconsidering and ultimately withdrawing them, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights (1993). In this regard, the Committee considers that the State party should benefit from the recent withdrawal of a similar reservation by another State party. In addition, the Committee recommends that the State party study its reservations to articles 14, 20 and 21 of the Convention with a view to withdrawing them (CRC/C/133).

Canada

The Committee, while noting the implementation of some of the recommendations (CRC/C/15/Add.37 of 20 June 1995) it made upon consideration of the State party’s initial report (CRC/C/11/Add.3), regrets that the rest have not been, or have been insufficiently, addressed, particularly those contained in: paragraph 18, referring to the possibility of withdrawing reservations The Committee notes that those concerns and recommendations are reiterated in the present document.

The Committee urges the State party to make every effort to address those recommendations contained in the concluding observations on the initial report that have not yet been implemented and to provide effective follow-up to the recommendations contained in the present concluding observations on the second periodic report.

The Committee notes the efforts of the Government towards the removal of the reservation to article 37 (c) of the Convention, but regrets the rather slow process and regrets even more the statement made by the delegation that the State party does not intend to withdraw its reservation to article 21. The Committee reiterates its concern with respect to the reservations maintained by the State party to articles 21 and 37 (c).

In light of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, the Committee urges the State party to reconsider and expedite the withdrawal of the reservations made to the Convention. The Committee invites the State party to continue its dialogue with the Aboriginals with a view to the withdrawal of the reservation to article 21 of the Convention. (CRC/C/133).

The Committee notes with concern that the State party made reservations to articles 21 and 37 (c) of the Convention.

The Committee wishes to encourage Canada to review its reservations to the Convention and to consider the possibility of withdrawing them, and would like to be kept informed of developments on this fundamental matter (CRC/C/43).

China

In the light of the discussion in the Committee on the question of the continuing need for the State party's reservation to article 6 of the Convention and the information provided by the State party that it is open to considering making adjustments in regard to its reservation, the Committee encourages the State party to review its reservation to the Convention with a view to its withdrawal (A/53/41).

Croatia

The Committee welcomes the statement by the delegation that the Government intends to withdraw its reservation to article 9 of the Convention (CRC/C/50).

The Committee welcomes the withdrawal of its reservation on article 9, paragraph 1, of the Convention in 1998 (CRC/C/143).

Czech Republic

The Committee regrets that some of its recommendations in the previous concluding observations (CRC/C/15/Add.81) have been insufficiently addressed, inter alia the reservation to article 7, paragraph 1, of the Convention (ibid., para. 26).... The Committee notes that those recommendations are reiterated in the present document.

The Committee urges the State party to make every effort to address those recommendations contained in the concluding observations on the initial report that have not yet been fully implemented and to address the list of concerns contained in the present concluding observations on the second periodic report.

The Committee regrets that the State party has not withdrawn its reservation to article 7, paragraph 1, of the Convention. Based on the dialogue, it is the Committee's understanding that the civil registration of irreversible adoption does not necessarily mean that the adopted child has no possibility of knowing his or her (biological) parents.

The Committee therefore recommends that the State party reconsider its position and withdraw its reservation (CRC/C/132).

While acknowledging the openness of the State party towards the possibility of reviewing its reservation to article 7, paragraph 1, of the Convention, the Committee remains concerned that this reservation might impede the full implementation of the Convention.

In the light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of 1993, the Committee encourages the State party to review its reservation to article 7, paragraph 1, of the Convention (A/53/41).

Denmark

The Committee notes the initiative of the State party, through its Standing Committee on Procedural Law, to initiate the process of reviewing its reservation to article 40 (2) (b) (v) of the Convention.

In light of the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights (1993), the Committee encourages the State party to complete the process of review of its reservation to article 40 (2) (b) (v) of the Convention with a view to withdrawing it (CRC/C/108).

The Committee notes with concern that the State party made a reservation to article 40 (2) (b) (v) of the Convention, but also notes that the Government may reconsider that reservation.

The Committee wishes to encourage the State party to consider the possibility of withdrawing its reservation to the Convention, and would like to be kept informed of developments on this matter (CRC/C/38).

Djibouti

The Committee is concerned that the broad and imprecise nature of the general declaration made by the State party upon ratification of the Convention, which amounts to a reservation, potentially negates many of the Convention's provisions and raises concerns as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention. The Committee welcomes indications that the declaration may have been intended primarily to address only the issue of the right of the child to freedom of religion and that efforts will be made to review the situation.

In the light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, and bearing in mind the provisions of article 27 of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, the Committee encourages the State party to review the general nature of its declaration to the Convention on the Rights of the Child with a view to its withdrawal. Initial report (CRC/C/97).

Egypt

The Committee observes that the State party's reservation to articles 20 and 21 of the Convention is unnecessary. It points out that article 20 (3) of the Convention expressly recognizes kafalah of Islamic law as a form of alternative care. Article 21 expressly refers to those States that "recognize and/or permit" the system of adoption, which does not apply to the State party because it does not recognize the system of adoption.

The Committee recommends that the State party continue its efforts to consider withdrawal of its reservation to articles 20 and 21 of the Convention, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights (1993) (CRC/C/103).

Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro)

The Committee encourages the State party to review its reservation to the Convention with a view to considering its withdrawal (CRC/C/50).

France

The Committee regrets that some of the concerns and recommendations (CRC/C/15/Add.20) it made upon consideration of the State party's initial report (CRC/C/3/Add.15) have been insufficiently addressed, particularly those contained in paragraphs: 11, 17 (on the reservation to article 30) The Committee notes that those concerns and recommendations are reiterated in the present document.

The Committee urges the State party to make every effort to address those recommendations from the concluding observations of the initial report that have not yet been implemented and to address the list of concerns contained in the present concluding observations on the second periodic report. The Committee also urges the State party to incorporate the concept of the child as a subject of rights in all policies, programmes and projects and reiterates the invitation to the State party to withdraw its reservation and both declarations.

The Committee welcomes information provided in the State party's report that all children in France are equal before the law and have a right to freedom of religion, expression in their own language in private affairs and right to cultural activities. However, the Committee remains concerned that equality before the law may not be sufficient to ensure equal enjoyment of rights by certain minority groups, such as the Roma, among others, who may face de facto discrimination. The Committee regrets that the State party has not considered reviewing its position and withdrawing its reservation to article 30 of the Convention.

The Committee encourages the State party to continue measures to prevent and combat racism, xenophobia, discrimination and intolerance, by, inter alia, ensuring follow-up to the recommendations of the United Nations treaty bodies and the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI), in particular as concerns children. The Committee urges the State party to review its position with respect to children belonging to minority groups and to consider withdrawing its reservation to article 30 (CRC/C/140).

The Committee notes with concern the reservation made by the State party to article 30 of the Convention. The Committee wishes to emphasize that the Convention on the Rights of the Child seeks to protect and guarantee the individual rights of children, including the rights of children belonging to minorities.

The Committee wishes to encourage the State party to consider reviewing its reservation to article 30 of the Convention with a view to withdrawing it (CRC/C/29).

Germany

The Committee acknowledges the information (CRC/C/83/Add.7, paras. 84 and 844 and written replies, pp. 46 and 47) that the reservations and declarations the State party made upon ratification have become unnecessary, inter alia, due to recent legislation. But the Committee remains concerned at the lack of willingness of the majority of the Länder to accept the withdrawal of these reservations and declarations.

In light of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, and in line with its previous recommendations (CRC/C/15/43, para. 22), the Committee recommends that the State party expedite the process for the withdrawal of the reservations and declarations it had made before the submission of its next periodic report and increase, in particular, its efforts to convince the Länder of the need to withdraw them.

In addition to the reservations to article 40 (2) (b) (ii) and (v), the Committee is concerned at the increasing number of children placed in detention, disproportionately affecting children of foreign origin, and that children in detention or custody are placed with persons up to the age of 25 years.

The Committee is concerned about the reservations to articles 26, 37 and 40 entered by the State party on its accession to the Convention.

In light of the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights in 1993, the Committee recommends that the State party withdraw its reservations to the Convention (CRC/C/137).

Holy See

The Committee is concerned about reservations entered by the Holy See to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, in particular with respect to the full recognition of the child as a subject of rights (CRC/C/46).

Indonesia

The Committee welcomes the information that Law No. 23 of 2002 on Child Protection renders the reservations made by the State party with regard to articles 1, 14, 16, 17, 21, 22 and 29 of the Convention unnecessary and that all reservations will therefore be withdrawn shortly.

The Committee, in line with its previous recommendations (CRC/C/15/Add.25), and in light of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, recommends that the State party make the withdrawal of all reservations a matter of priority and that it take the necessary procedural measures to that effect (CRC/C/137).

The Committee takes note of the willingness expressed by the State party to review its national legislation in the light of its obligations under the Convention and as reflected in the “Beijing consensus” of August 1992. It also welcomes the State party’s commitment to review the reservations it has made to the Convention with a view to considering withdrawing them.

The Committee is deeply concerned at the extent of the reservations made to the Convention by the State party. The Committee feels that the broad and imprecise nature of these reservations raises serious concern as to their compatibility with the object and purposes of the Convention (A/49/41).

Iran (Islamic Republic of)

Noting information from the State party that a governmental working group has been established to study the compatibility of existing laws with the Convention, the Committee is nevertheless concerned that the broad and imprecise nature of the State party’s general reservation potentially negates many of the Convention’s provisions and raises concern as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention.

The Committee recommends that the State party expedite this study and use the findings to review the general nature of its reservation with a view to narrowing, and in the long-term withdrawing in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (CRC/C/97).

Iraq

The Committee notes with concern the reservation to article 14.1 made by the State party upon ratification of the Convention. In the light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (1993), the Committee encourages the State party to consider the possibility of reviewing the reservation with a view to its withdrawal (A/55/41).

Japan

The Committee is concerned about the State party’s declarations on articles 9 and 10 and its reservation to article 37 (c). In accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights in 1993 (A/CONF.157/23), the Committee reiterates its recommendation that the State party withdraw its declarations on and reservation to the Convention (CRC/C/37).

The Committee notes with concern the reservation made by the State party to article 37 (c) of the Convention, as well as the declarations made in relation to articles 9, paragraph 1, and 10, paragraph 1.

In light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of 1993, the Committee encourages the State party to consider reviewing its reservation to article 37 (c) and its declarations with a view to their withdrawal (A/55/41).

Jordan

The Committee observes that the State party's reservation to articles 20 and 21 of the Convention is superfluous. It points out that article 20 (3) of the Convention expressly recognizes kafalah of Islamic law as alternative care, and article 21 expressly refers to those States that "recognize and/or permit" the system of adoption, which in any case does not apply to Jordan.

The Committee recommends to the State party to withdraw its reservation to articles 20 and 21 of the Convention, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action.

The Committee is concerned that the broad and imprecise nature of the reservation to article 14 potentially gives rise to infringements of the freedoms of thought, conscience and religion, and raises questions of its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention.

In light of its previous recommendations (CRC/C/15/Add.21), the Committee recommends to the State party to study its reservation to article 14 with a view to narrowing it, taking account of the Human Rights Committee's General Comment 22 and recommendations (CCPR/C/79/Add.35), and eventually, to withdraw it in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (CRC/C/97).

The Committee is concerned that the broad nature of the reservations made to articles 14, 20 and 21 of the Convention by the State party may affect the implementation of the rights guaranteed in these articles and may raise questions about the compatibility of the reservations with the object and purpose of the Convention.

The Committee expresses the hope that the Government will consider the possibility of reviewing its reservations to articles 14, 20 and 21 of the Convention, with a view to the withdrawal of these reservations (CRC/C/29).

Liechtenstein

The Committee welcomes the State party's preparation of legislation that will further facilitate access to Liechtenstein citizenship for stateless persons. In this regard, it further welcomes the intention of the State party to withdraw its reservations to article 7 of the Convention and to accede to the relevant international conventions on statelessness.

The Committee encourages the State party to complete the revision of the legislation regarding acquisition of Liechtenstein citizenship as soon as possible, in light of the Convention. Additionally, the Committee encourages the State party to pay special attention to the position of children born in Liechtenstein to stateless parents. In this connection, the Committee also recommends that the State party withdraw its reservation to article 7 at the earliest possible opportunity and ratify the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.

The Committee is concerned about the reservation made by the State party to article 10 (2) of the Convention as well as the State's policy regarding family reunification. These suggest that the State party has serious difficulties in dealing with applications for the purpose of family reunification in a positive, humane and expeditious manner and without adverse consequences for the applicants.

The Committee recommends that the State party take the necessary legal and other measures to establish a practice in the area of family reunification in accordance with the principles and provisions of the Convention. The Committee further encourages the State party to consider the withdrawal of its reservation to article 10 (2) of the Convention (CRC/C/103).

Luxembourg

The Committee is concerned that the State party has made reservations affecting articles 2, 6, 7 and 15 of the Convention.

In the light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of 1993, the Committee encourages the State party to consider reviewing its reservations with a view to their withdrawal (A/55/41).

Maldives

The Committee is concerned that the reservations made to articles 14 and 21 of the Convention by the State party may affect the implementation of the rights guaranteed in these articles.

In the light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights in June 1993, which encouraged States to withdraw reservations to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Committee recommends the State party to consider reviewing its reservations to the Convention with a view to withdrawing them (A/55/41).

Mali

The Committee notes the commitment expressed by the delegation to encourage the State party to withdraw its reservation to article 16 of the Convention and recommends that all necessary measures be taken to facilitate the process at the earliest possible opportunity, in the light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (1993) (A/55/41).

Malta

The Committee notes that the reservation to article 26 of the Convention entered by the State party upon ratification of this international instrument may have an adverse effect on the existing levels of social services and benefits for children.

In light of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and its Programme of Action, the Committee recommends that the State party review the reservation made to article 26 of the Convention with a view to withdrawing it (CRC/C/97).

Mauritius

The Committee welcomes the oral and written commitment of the Government of Mauritius to withdrawing its reservation to article 22 of the Convention.

In the spirit of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights in June 1993, in which States were urged to withdraw reservations to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Committee wishes to encourage the State party to take steps to withdraw its reservation to article 22 of the Convention (A/53/41).

Monaco

The Committee is concerned that some legislative provisions are not in full conformity with provisions of the Convention.

The Committee recommends that the State party proceed with efforts to amend domestic legislation with a view to ensuring full respect for the provisions of the Convention. Noting ongoing efforts to change domestic legislation with regard to nationality, the Committee recommends withdrawal of the State party's reservation in this regard. The Committee recommends, in addition, that the State party pursue its current efforts towards ratification of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.

The Committee is concerned at the State party's declaration and reservation made upon ratification of the Convention.

The Committee welcomes the State party's indication of its intention to withdraw its declaration made upon ratification of the Convention and its willingness to consider withdrawal of its reservation (CRC/C/108).

Morocco

The Committee welcomes the publication of the Convention in the Official Gazette and the ratification of ILO Convention No. 138, but regrets that some of the concerns it expressed and the recommendations it made (CRC/C/15/Add.60) after its consideration of the State party's initial report (CRC/C/28/Add.1) have been insufficiently addressed, particularly those contained in paragraphs 20 to 28, such as the reservation made to article 14 of the Convention ... Those concerns and recommendations are reiterated in the present document.

The Committee urges the State party to make every effort to address the previous recommendations that have not yet been implemented and the concerns contained in the present concluding observations.

The Committee is concerned at the reservation made to article 14 of the Convention by the State party, which affects the implementation of the rights guaranteed in this article, but welcomes the information given during the dialogue that the State party will reconsider the need for this reservation.

The Committee, in line with its previous recommendations (CRC/C/15/Add.60, para. 18) and in light of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, encourages the State party to reconsider its reservation to article 14 with a view to withdrawing it (CRC/C/132).

The Committee is concerned at the reservation made to article 14 of the Convention by the State party, which may affect the implementation of the rights guaranteed in this article and may raise questions about the compatibility of the reservation with the objective and purpose of the Convention.

The Committee recommends that the Government of Morocco consider reviewing the reservation entered upon ratification of the Convention with a view to withdrawing it, in the spirit of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted in June 1993, in which the World Conference on Human Rights urged States to withdraw reservations to the Convention on the Rights of the Child (A/53/41).

Myanmar

The Committee welcomes the fact that the State party has withdrawn its reservations on articles 15 and 37 of the Convention (A/53/41).

Netherlands

The Committee is encouraged that the State party has indicated its willingness to reconsider its reservation to article 10 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. However, it notes with concern the reservations to articles 26, 37 and 40 of the Convention made by the State party. In the light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (1993), the Committee encourages the State party to consider withdrawing all of its reservations.

The Committee is seriously concerned about the implications of the reservation entered by the State party on the applicability of adult criminal law to children over 16 years of age. The Committee is also seriously concerned at information provided which indicates that children aged 12 to 15 are also sometimes tried under adult criminal law. The Committee urges the State party to ensure that under the existing law no child under the age of 16 at the time of the commission of a crime is tried under adult criminal law, and to review the reservation mentioned above with a view to withdrawing it. The Committee further recommends that the State party takes legislative steps to ensure that a life sentence cannot be imposed on children who are tried under adult criminal law (A/55/41).

The Committee is concerned that the reservations made by the State party with respect to articles 26, 37 and 40 of the Convention, as well as the declaration concerning article 22, have not yet been withdrawn and are still applicable to the Netherlands Antilles.

In light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (1993), the Committee encourages the State party in its intention, as stated by the delegation, to withdraw all of its reservations and declarations, including with respect to the Netherlands Antilles.

The Committee is seriously concerned about the implications of the reservation entered by the State party on the applicability of adult criminal law to children over 16 years of age which is applicable to the Netherlands Antilles, and the reservation to article 40, which stipulates that for minor offences children need not be heard in the presence of a legal representative. The Committee is further concerned at reports that minors below 16 are held together with adults in detention facilities. In addition, the Committee is concerned that there are insufficient facilities for children in conflict with the law, limited training programmes for professionals working in the juvenile justice system, no available complaint mechanism directly accessible for children whose rights have been violated, and a lack of statistical data on the juvenile justice system (CRC/C/118).

New Zealand

While noting that the State party is considering withdrawing its reservations to the Convention, the Committee is disappointed by the slow pace of this process and that it has not yet resulted in the withdrawal of a reservation. The Committee remains very concerned at the State party's general reservation and the reservations specific to articles 32, paragraph 2 and 37 (c).

In accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of 1993, the Committee recommends that the State party:

Expedite the changes in legislation and administrative procedures necessary for the withdrawal of its general reservation and the reservations to articles 32, paragraph 2 and 37 (c);

Continue its discussions with the people of Tokelau with a view to extending the application of the Convention to their territory (CRC/C/133).

The Committee is concerned about the broad nature of the reservations made to the Convention by the State party, which raise questions as to their compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention. Moreover, the Committee regrets that the State party has not extended the Convention with respect to the territory of Tokelau, which is not at present a sovereign State and remains a Non-Self-Governing Territory in important respects (A/53/41).

Norway

The Committee welcomes the withdrawal of the State party's reservation to article 40 (2) (b) (v) of the Convention in 1995, following amendments to the Criminal Procedure Act. In addition, the Committee is encouraged by amendments to the Children Act which strengthen the position of children and the protection of their rights (CRC/C/97).

The Committee welcomes the steps taken by the Government of Norway to review its reservation to the Convention with a view to its withdrawal. It also appreciates the concern expressed by the Government of Norway as to reservations made by any State party which are incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention as prohibited in the Convention's article 51.

The Committee wishes to encourage the State party to take the necessary steps for withdrawing its reservation to the Convention in the very near future and would like to be kept informed of developments on this matter (CRC/C/29).

Oman

The Committee welcomes information that the State party is re-examining its reservations to articles 7, 9, 21 and 30 of the Convention. While noting difficulties that the State party may have, the Committee is nevertheless concerned that its reservation to article 14 is not included in this re-examination.

The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Expeditiously complete its re-examination of its reservations to articles 7, 9, 21 and 30 of the Convention with a view to withdrawing them in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights (1993);

(b) Study its reservation to article 14 with a view to narrowing it, taking account of the Human Rights Committee's general comment No. 22 on freedom of thought, conscience and religion (CRC/C/111).

Pakistan

The Committee welcomes the withdrawal on 23 July 1997 of the State party's general reservation to the Convention (CRC/C/133).

The Committee is of the opinion that the broad and imprecise nature of the reservation made to the Convention raises deep concern as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention.

The Committee expresses the firm hope that the State party will review its reservation with a view to withdrawing it (CRC/C/29).

Poland

The Committee further welcomes the intention expressed by the delegation to review the contents of the reservations and declarations made at the moment of the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of the Child with a view to considering their possible withdrawal (CRC/C/29).

Qatar

The Committee welcomes information that the State party is re-examining its reservation to the Convention with a view to amending or withdrawing it. The Committee is concerned that the broad and imprecise nature of the State party's general reservation potentially negates many of the Conventions provisions and raises concern as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention, as well as the overall implementation of the Convention.

The Committee encourages the State party to expeditiously complete its re-examination of its reservation with a view to narrowing and ultimately withdrawing it, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights of 1993 (CRC/C/111).

Republic of Korea

The Committee regrets that most recommendations in the concluding observations (CRC/C/15/Add.51), adopted following its consideration of the State party's initial report (CRC/C/8/Add.21), have been insufficiently addressed, particularly those regarding:

- (a) The withdrawal of reservations (para. 19)

The Committee remains very concerned at the State party's reservations to articles 9, paragraph 3, 21, paragraph (a), and 40, paragraph 2 (b) (v).

The Committee, noting that juveniles sentenced for having committed a crime have the right to appeal, encourages the State party to withdraw, as soon as possible, the reservations made to article 40, paragraph 2 (b) (v). The State party is also encouraged to expedite the process of reforming the Civil Act so that both children and parents are guaranteed the right to maintain contact with each other, and to strengthen its efforts to change public attitudes to domestic adoption, in order to withdraw the reservations to articles 21, paragraph (a), and 9, paragraph 3, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted in 1993 (CRC/C/132).

The Committee also welcomes the openness, reflected in the written replies and reaffirmed by the delegation during the dialogue, towards considering the possibility of withdrawing the reservations entered by the State party to the Convention. The Committee is encouraged by the revision of the Civil Code that is being undertaken with the aim of incorporating the right of the child who is separated from one or both parents to maintain personal relations and direct contact with both parents on a regular basis. It is also encouraged by the fact that, as stated by the delegation, such a measure will enable the State party to withdraw its reservation pertaining to article 9, paragraph 3 of the Convention.

The Committee is of the view that the reservations made by the State party to article 9, paragraph 3, article 21, paragraph (a) and article 40, paragraph 2 (b)(v) raise questions about their compatibility with the principles and provisions of the Convention, including the principles of the best interests of the child and respect for the views of the child.

The Committee encourages the Government to continue to consider reviewing its reservations to article 9, paragraph 3, article 21, paragraph (a) and article 40, paragraph (b)(v), with a view to withdrawing them (CRC/C/50).

Saudi Arabia

The Committee is concerned that the broad and imprecise nature of the State party's general reservation potentially negates many of the Convention's provisions and raises concern as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention, as well as the overall implementation of the Convention.

The Committee recommends that the State party withdraw its reservation, in accordance with the Declaration and Plan of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights (CRC/C/103).

Singapore

The Committee is concerned about the declarations on articles 12-17, 19 and 39 and reservations to articles 7, 9, 10, 22, 28 and 32 entered by the State party on its accession to the Convention.

In light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of the 1993 World Conference on Human Rights, the Committee recommends that the State party withdraw its declarations on and reservations to the Convention (CRC/C/133).

Slovenia

The Committee is of the view that the reservation made by the State party to article 9, paragraph 1, raises questions about its compatibility with the principles and provisions of the Convention, including the principle of the best interests of the child.

The Committee takes note of the statement made by the delegation that the reservation on article 9, paragraph 1, made by Slovenia upon ratification of the Convention may be reviewed, with a view to its eventual withdrawal. It wishes to encourage the State party to consider withdrawing this reservation to the Convention, and would like to be kept informed of developments on this matter (A/53/41).

The Committee welcomes a number of positive developments in the reporting period, including:

(a) The recent official withdrawal of the State party's reservation to article 9, paragraph 1, of the Convention (CRC/C/137).

Sudan

The Committee expresses satisfaction at the State party's early ratification of the Convention without any reservations and for the timely submission of its initial report. However, the Committee feels that in the light of the adopted guidelines further information would be required, inter alia, on special protection measures and on the policies and strategies required to realize health care and education goals (A/49/41).

Switzerland

The Committee is concerned at the reservations made by the State party to articles 5, 7, 10 and 37 and the four reservations made with regard to article 40, but welcomes the information that the State party is considering the withdrawal of most of these reservations thanks to recent and current revisions of the Constitution and other relevant laws, following a tentative timetable presented during the dialogue. Despite this information, the Committee remains concerned at the rather slow pace of this withdrawal process and even more at the fact that some reservations may not be withdrawn at all, or only in the distant future.

In light of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Expedite as much as possible the process for the withdrawal of the reservations regarding the provision of an interpreter free of charge (art. 40 (2) (b) (vi)) and use this process to withdraw as soon as possible the reservation to article 5, given the fact that this reservation is, according to the State party, only an interpretative declaration that is not intended to affect the meaning of article 5;

(b) Expedite the current revision of the naturalization law and withdraw as soon as possible after the approval of this revision the reservation made to article 7;

(c) Expedite the current revision of the Foreign Nationals Act (formerly Federal Act concerning the Permanent and Temporary Residence of Foreigners) and withdraw as soon as possible after the approval of the revision the reservation made to article 10, paragraph 1, regarding family reunification;

(d) Expedite the approval and enactment of the new Juvenile Penal Law in order to start as soon as possible thereafter the withdrawal of the reservation to article 40 (2) (b) (ii) regarding legal assistance and to article 37 (c) regarding separation of juveniles deprived of their liberty from adults;

(e) Reconsider the reservation made with regard to the possibility of having the same juvenile judge as an investigating and a sentencing judge since the requirement of an independent and impartial authority or judicial body (art. 40 (2) (b) (iii)) does not necessarily and under all circumstances mean that investigating and sentencing juvenile judges cannot be the same person;

(f) Expedite the current legal reform which abolishes the competence of the Federal Tribunal as a court of first instance and withdraw as soon as possible after approval of that reform the reservation made to article 40 (2) (b) (v).

While welcoming the entry into force of the federal asylum legislation (Federal Asylum Act and Ordinance 1 on Asylum Procedure) on 1 October 1999, the Committee remains concerned that the procedure used for unaccompanied minors is not always in their best interests nor fully in line with relevant provisions of the Convention. In addition, in relation to the reservation made to article 10 of the Convention, the Committee is concerned that the right to family reunification is too restricted.

The Committee recommends that the State party simplify its approach regarding the procedures for requesting asylum and take all necessary measures to expedite them and to ensure they take into account the special needs and requirements of children, in particular unaccompanied children; these include the designation of a legal representative, the placement of such children in centres, and their access to health care and education. In addition, the Committee recommends that the State party review its system for family reunification, notably for refugees who stay for a long period in the State party (CRC/C/118).

Syrian Arab Republic

The Committee regrets that no review has been undertaken with respect to the reservations since the presentation of the initial report. Noting the State party's reasoning in the report, it reiterates its concern that the nature of the general reservation potentially negates many of the Convention's provisions and raises concern as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention. In particular, concerning article 14, the reservation gives rise to infringements of the freedoms of thought, conscience and religion; concerning articles 20 and 21, the reservation is unnecessary: the Committee points out that article 20 (3) of the Convention expressly recognizes kafalah as a form of alternative care. Article 21 expressly refers to those States that "recognize and/or permit" the system of adoption, which does not apply to the State party because it does not recognize the system of adoption.

The Committee recommends that the State party, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Plan of Action, and taking account of the Human Rights Committee's general comment No. 22, study its reservation, particularly concerning articles 14, 20 and 21, with a view to withdrawing it (CRC/C/132).

The Committee is concerned that the broad nature of the reservations made by the State party to articles 14, 20 and 21 of the Convention may cause misunderstandings about the nature of the State's commitment to implementing the rights covered by these articles.

The Committee encourages the State party to review its reservations to articles 14, 20 and 21 of the Convention. In this regard, the Committee underlines that interpretative declarations by the State party might have the desired effect of clarifying the State position in respect of these particular rights (A/53/41).

Thailand

While noting with appreciation that the State party has withdrawn its reservation with respect to article 29 of the Convention, the Committee is concerned at the remaining reservations (to arts. 7 and 22), made by the State party upon ratification of the Convention. In this regard, the Committee notes that the State party has recently (1997) ratified without reservation the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and wishes to draw attention in particular to the provisions of articles 2 and 24 of the Covenant. In the light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of 1993 and the recent ratification of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Committee encourages the State party to consider the possibility of reviewing its reservations with a view to withdrawing them (A/55/41).

Tunisia

In light of the previous recommendations (ibid., para. 10), the Committee notes with satisfaction the withdrawal, on 1 March 2002, of the reservation with regard to article 40, paragraph 2 (b) (v), and the declaration in which the State party declared that "its undertaking to implement the provisions of this Convention shall be limited by the means at its disposal".

While welcoming the State party's withdrawal of its reservation with regard to article 40, paragraph 2 (b) (v), and its declaration, as noted above, and noting the statement by the delegation that consideration will be given to withdrawing the remaining reservations, the Committee remains concerned about the extent of reservations and declarations made to the Convention by the State party. In particular, the Committee reiterates that the reservation relating to the application of article 2 appears to be incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention.

The Committee, in line with its previous recommendation, and in light of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (1993), encourages the State party to consider reviewing its reservations and declarations to the Convention with a view to withdrawing them, in particular the reservation relating to article 2 (CRC/C/118).

The Committee is concerned about the extent of the reservations and declarations made to the Convention by the State party. In particular, the reservation relating to the application of article 2 raises concern as to its compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention.

In the spirit of the final document of the World Conference on Human Rights, the Committee wishes to encourage the State party to consider reviewing its reservations and declarations to the Convention with a view to withdrawing them, including particularly the reservation relating to article 2 of the Convention (CRC/C/43).

Turkey

The Committee notes with concern the reservations to articles 17, 29 and 30 of the Convention. It also notes that, in some cases, in particular in the fields of education and freedom of expression and the right to enjoy their own culture and use their own language, these reservations may have a negative impact on children belonging to ethnic groups which are not recognized as minorities under the Treaty of Lausanne of 1923, in particular children of Kurdish origin.

The Committee encourages the State party to consider withdrawing its reservations to articles 17, 29 and 30 of the Convention (CRC/C/108).

United Arab Emirates

The Committee welcomes information by the delegation that the reservation to article 21 will be withdrawn. However, the Committee is concerned about the remaining reservations to the Convention entered by the State party. In particular:

(a) That the exercise of the rights in articles 7 and 17 are subject to their compatibility with domestic law; and

(b) That the broad and imprecise nature of the reservation to article 14 potentially gives rise to infringements of the freedoms of thought, conscience and religion.

The Committee emphasizes that it is long established in international law that States parties to a treaty cannot invoke provisions of their domestic laws as justification for their inability to perform obligations under a treaty. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Withdraw its reservations to articles 7 and 21; and
- (b) Study its reservation to article 14 with a view to narrowing it, taking account of the Human Rights Committee's general comment No. 22 and in the long term, to withdraw it in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights (1993) (CRC/C/118).

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland

The Committee welcomes:

- (a) The withdrawal of two reservations made to articles 32 and 37 (d) of the Convention (CRC/C/121).

The Committee takes note of the adoption by the State party of a Children's Act applicable to England and Wales. The Committee also observes that the State party has extended the application of the Convention to many of its dependent territories. The Committee welcomes the intention of the State party to consider withdrawing the reservation it made to article 37 of the Convention as it relates to the procedures governing children's hearings in Scotland.

The Committee is concerned about the broad nature of the reservations made to the Convention by the State party which raise concern as to their compatibility with the object and purpose of the Convention. In particular, the reservation relating to the application of the Nationality and Immigration Act does not appear to be compatible with the principles and provisions of the Convention, including those of its articles 2, 3, 9 and 10.

The Committee wishes to encourage the State party to consider reviewing its reservations to the Convention with a view to withdrawing them, particularly in light of the agreements made in this regard at the World Conference on Human Rights and incorporated in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (CRC/C/38).

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (Hong Kong)

With the extension of the Convention to Hong Kong in September 1994 further reservations to the Convention applicable to the territory of Hong Kong were deposited by the Government of the United Kingdom. It is a matter of regret to the Committee that the State party has not yet decided to withdraw its reservations, particularly as they relate to the issues of working hours for children, of juvenile justice and of refugees (A/53/41).

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (Isle of Man)

The Committee is concerned that the reservations made by the State party with respect to articles 32 and 37 (c) of the Convention on the Rights of the Child have not yet been withdrawn and are still applicable to the Isle of Man. The Committee welcomes the island's commitment to discussing further the possible withdrawal of all of its reservations to the Convention.

In the light of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, the Committee encourages the State party to consider the possibility of reviewing its reservations with a view to their full withdrawal, including with respect to the Isle of Man. In order to remove the apparent obstacles to the withdrawal of the reservation to article 37 (c) of the Convention, the Isle of Man is encouraged to reinforce its efforts to complete the construction of a separate security unit for children deprived of their liberty.

The Committee notes the Isle of Man's reservation with respect to article 32 of the Convention and is concerned about the lack of information and adequate data on the situation with regard to child labour and economic exploitation in the island.

The Committee encourages the Isle of Man to consider withdrawing its reservation to article 32 of the Convention. The Committee recommends that the State party undertake a comprehensive study to assess the situation with regard to child labour in the Isle of Man. Additionally, the Committee encourages the Isle of Man to introduce and/or strengthen, where appropriate, monitoring mechanisms to ensure the enforcement of labour laws and to protect children from economic exploitation, particularly in the informal sector. The Committee also suggests that the State party consider extending to the Isle of Man ILO Convention No. 182 concerning the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour. The Committee further suggests that the State party consider extending to the Isle of Man ILO Convention No. 138 concerning Minimum Age for Admission to Employment (CRC/C/100).

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (Overseas Territories)

The Committee is concerned that the reservations made by the State party with respect to articles 32 and 37 (c) of the Convention on the Rights of the Child have not yet been withdrawn and are still applicable to the Overseas Territories. It also notes with concern that the reservation to article 22 of the Convention made in respect to the Cayman Islands has not yet been withdrawn. In the light of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, the Committee encourages the State party to consider the possibility of reviewing the reservations with a view to their full withdrawal including with respect to all the Overseas Territories (CRC/C/100)

Annex 2

Tables of reservations, objections and withdrawals

Numbers next to a State in the rows of individual substantive provisions refer to the specific paragraph of the provision reserved or declared against, unless otherwise indicated.

Notes

- ¹ The actions listed are not always described as objections but in some manner contest the referred to action.
- ² The very numerous declarations of particular states of emergency under article 4 of the Covenant are not included here.
- ³ The partial withdrawal not being objected to by any other States over a 12-month period, the reservation was accepted from 1 December 2004.
- ⁴ By subsequent communication, the State party confirmed that this declaration did not aim to modify the legal effect of the provision.
- ⁵ It appears Guyana's reservation may amount to a technical error in its reference to article 6 (being the death penalty provision of the ICCPR). Article 1 of the Optional Protocol would appear more appropriate, as in the case of Trinidad and Tobago.
- ⁶ Barbados refers in error to paragraph (1) in addition to subparagraph (a).
- ⁷ Modified on 29 January 1999, refers to reservations to article 7 (a) and 16. It is not clear if modification, in this case introduction of reservations to articles 7 and 16 means that the original general reservation has been withdrawn or amounts to an addition. It is treated here as an addition.
- The Secretary-General proposed to receive this modification to the State party's global reservation in the absence of any objection on the part of any of the contracting States within the 90 days, i.e. 23 June 1999. No objection having been received, the modification was accepted for deposit upon the expiration of the 90-day period. Finland and Germany made objections on 17 August 1999 and 16 August 1999, respectively. It is interesting to note that Germany states (article 19 VCLT) that modifications may not be made post signing, ratifying, accepting approving or acceding to a treaty but only to withdraw or partially withdraw original reservations.
- ⁸ Modified in 1995 to include two reservations, relating to articles 2 and 16.
- ⁹ Although described by the Office of Legal Affairs as declarations these actions appear to be reservations as they limit the application of the Convention to the Constitution.
- ¹⁰ It is not clear to which article/s this relates; it is in respect of women working as underground mines.
- ¹¹ Reservation had only applied to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.
- ¹² Continues to apply with respect to overseas territories only.
- ¹³ Reservation had applied to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands. Withdrawn relates to United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. As to the withdrawal the United Kingdom informed the Secretary-General that “for the avoidance of doubt, that the declarations and reservations entered in respect of the dependent territories on behalf of which the Convention was also ratified on 7 April 1986 continue to apply, but are under active review”.

¹⁴ Although described as a declaration this appears to be a reservation limiting the application of the Convention to the Constitution, and the provisions of Islamic Shariah law.

¹⁵ Continues to apply to Overseas Territories.

¹⁶ Reservation had applied to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands. Withdrawn relates to United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. As to the withdrawal the United Kingdom informed the Secretary-General that “for the avoidance of doubt, that the declarations and reservations entered in respect of the dependent territories on behalf of which the Convention was also ratified on 7 April 1986 continue to apply, but are under active review”.

¹⁷ Applies to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

¹⁸ The Secretary-General proposed to receive modifications subsequently made to this provision in the absence of any objection on the part of any of the Contracting States within 90 days, i.e. on 20 July 1998. France and Netherlands made their objections to the partial withdrawal and modifications on 20 July and 21 July 1998. Germany, Finland, Denmark, Netherlands and Norway made its objections in 1996 to original reservations.

¹⁹ Relates to the Cook Islands only.

²⁰ Not objection but a desire that reservation would not be protracted.

²¹ See footnote 9.

²² Article not cited, but as it relates to traditional customs it is assumed it relates to article 5.

²³ Article not cited, but as it relates to combat duties, assumed to relate to article 7.

²⁴ See footnote 9.

²⁵ The Secretary-General proposed to receive this modification to the State party’s global reservation in the absence of any objection on the part of any of the contracting States within the 90 days, i.e. 23 June 1999. No objection having been received, the modification was accepted for deposit upon the expiration of the 90-day period. Finland and Germany made objections on 17 August 1999 and 16 August 1999, respectively. It is interesting to note that Germany states (article 19 VCLT) that modifications may not be made post signing, ratifying, accepting approving or acceding to a treaty but only to withdraw or partially withdraw original reservations.

²⁷ See footnote 9.

²⁸ See footnote 9.

²⁹ Applies to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

³⁰ This appears to be a reservation, although described as a declaration “does not consider it bound”.

³¹ See footnote 9.

³² Reservation had applied to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands. Partial withdrawal relates to United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. As to the withdrawal the United Kingdom informed the Secretary-General that “for the avoidance of doubt, that the declarations and reservations entered in respect of the dependent territories on behalf of which the Convention was also ratified on 7 April 1986 continue to apply, but are under active review”.

³³ Reservation appears to apply to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and not to the Overseas Territories.

³⁴ Applies to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

Deleted:

³⁵ Applies to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

³⁶ Reservation had applied to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands. Partial withdrawal relates to United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. As to the withdrawal the United Kingdom informed the Secretary-General that “for the avoidance of doubt, that the declarations and reservations entered in respect of the dependent territories on behalf of which the Convention was also ratified on 7 April 1986 continue to apply, but are under active review”.

³⁷ Withdrawal only applies to metropolitan territory.

³⁸ Applies to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

³⁹ Reservation had applied to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands. Partial withdrawal relates to United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. As to the withdrawal the United Kingdom informed the Secretary-General that “for the avoidance of doubt, that the declarations and reservations entered in respect of the dependent territories on behalf of which the Convention was also ratified on 7 April 1986 continue to apply, but are under active review”.

⁴⁰ Although described as a declaration appears to be a reservation, limiting its application to its compatibility with the Moroccan Code.

⁴¹ Applies to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

⁴² This appears to be reservation although described as a declaration “does not consider it bound”.

⁴³ Applies to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

⁴⁴ Reservation had applied to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands. Partial withdrawal relates to United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. As to the withdrawal the United Kingdom informed the Secretary-General that “for the avoidance of doubt, that the declarations and reservations entered in respect of the dependent territories on behalf of which the Convention was also ratified on 7 April 1986 continue to apply, but are under active review”.

⁴⁵ See footnote 9.

⁴⁶ See footnote 12.

⁴⁷ Applies to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

⁴⁸ This appears to be a reservation although described as a declaration “does not consider it bound”.

⁴⁹ See footnote 9.

⁵⁰ According to Denmark no time limit applies to objections against reservations which are inadmissible under international law.

⁵¹ Applies to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. The Government of the United Kingdom stated “for the avoidance of doubt, that the declarations and reservations entered in respect of the dependent territories on behalf of which the Convention was also ratified on 7 April 1986 continue to apply, but are under active review”.

⁵² Although the United Nations Office of Legal Affairs described this (“will apply article 14, paragraph 1 in consonance with the existing laws and legislation in the country”) as a declaration, it appears to be a clear reservation similar to the reservation made by New Zealand.

⁵³ This is described as an “understanding” of the declaration rather than an objection.

⁵⁴ Although described as a declaration by the State party and the United Nations Office of Legal Affairs, most objecting States parties treat it as a reservation.

⁵⁵ The United Nations Office of Legal Affairs and the State party regard this as a declaration but it appears to be a reservation (“pursuant to article 28 of the Convention, it does not recognize the competence of the Committee provided for in article 20 of the Convention”).

⁵⁶ It is not clear whether the declaration applies to article 21 alone or also article 22. It has been this accorded widest application, that is, with respect to both provisions.

⁵⁷ It is not clear whether the declaration applies to article 21 alone or also article 22. It has been this accorded widest application, that is, with respect to both provisions.

⁵⁸ The United Nations Office of Legal Affairs \(OLA\) classifies this as a declaration, although it appears to be a reservation as the wording is similar to reservations of other States.

⁵⁹ See footnote 58.

⁶⁰ Although described as a declaration, this appears to be a reservation as relates to the implementation which must be in compliance with its religion and traditional values.

⁶¹ It is not clear to which article/s this reservation relates.

⁶² Although described as a declaration this appears to be a reservation as provides that the implementation of the Convention may not conflict with the Constitution.

⁶³ Applies to overseas territories as well as United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

⁶⁴ On 11 May 1993, Denmark notified the Secretary-General that it had decided to withdraw its declaration with regard to the application of the Convention to Greenland and the Faroe Islands, which had declared that the Convention should not apply to these Islands.

⁶⁵ General declarations apply to Overseas Territories, as well as United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

⁶⁶ In the view of Denmark and Belgium there is no time limit to making objections to reservations which are inadmissible under international law.

⁶⁷ The Netherlands objects to the reservations by Andorra but the statements made are referred to as declarations. Statements made relating to article 7 and 8 appear to be reservations.

⁶⁸ This same action (same wording) is described as a reservation when made by Austria.

⁶⁹ Although described as a declaration, this appears to be a reservation as it states that the Convention must be applied in compliance with the Algerian legal system.

⁷⁰ This same action (same wording) is described as a reservation when made by Austria.

⁷¹ Applies to Cayman Islands and Hong Kong.

⁷² Although described as a declaration, this appears to be a reservation as it states that this article must be implemented in accordance with its national legislation.

⁷³ Applies to Overseas Territories except Pitcairn.

⁷⁴ Withdrawal does not apply to Overseas Territories.

Deleted: inapplicable

⁷⁵ Applies to Overseas Territories, as well as to United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

⁷⁶ Unclear why in both of these cases the action taken is referred to as a reservation.

⁷⁸ No declarations or reservations were made to any of the procedural provisions.

⁷⁹ No declarations or reservations were made to any of the procedural provisions.

⁸⁰ No article referred to, but appears to relate to article 5 only.

⁸¹ No declarations or reservations were made to the procedural provisions.
